REVEAL SECRET BRIDAL

North Shore society got a thrill today when news was spread of the secret marriage at Peabody on June 27 of Eben B. Phillips, member of the noted millionaire Phillips family of Swampscott, to Gertrude Mace Phillips, divorced wife of the groom's cousin, Harry F. Phillips.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. George W. Peckham, pastor of the Universalist Church at Peabody. There was no display. Only immediate friends were taken into the secret.

Phillips and his bride are spending a three-months' honeymoon in the Middle West, where he has a string of valuable horses listed in the grand circuit races. Every precaution was taken to prevent news of the wedding getting into the newspapers.

ADDS ANOTHER CHAPTER.

It is the latest chapter in the annals of the Phillips family, which has figured prominently in headlines in the past decade, a family marked by tragedy and unhappy marriages.

The latest wedding is the sequel to a double divorce and two romantic courtships which Gertrude May Mace, daughter of a Marblehead expressman, had with two members of a house whose wealth appears to have been blighted by the hand of fate.

Harry Phillips, young and dashing, considered a fine catch by society mothers, wooed the expressman's daughter when she was an amateur actress just after she graduated from high school. She is twenty-five now and her new husband is forty.

The younger Phillips objected to his step-father's attentions to his bride. Finally they became so open, to the opinion of Harry, that he sued Eben Phillips for $25,000 for alleged alienation of his wife's affections. He also brought suit against his wife for divorce, naming his step-father.

Gertrude filed a counter suit, naming Miss Inez Fiske, a pretty clerk in a Lynn department store, whom she claimed Harry took out automobiling.

Eben B. Phillips was in turn sued for divorce by his wife. Harry's mother, who named her son's wife, Gertrude, in her suit. This triangu-

NEW FIGHT AGAINST ELOPER

A secret conference at the Bingham Court and announcement that application for an additional warrant against Louis Eisman had been made in the Quincy Court were the developments today in the Hallian-Eisman elopement case.

It was learned today also that Judge Avery of the Quincy District Court had failed to give any order on the warrant application before him. He has had the matter under advisement five days, but has declined, for reasons not made public, either to deny or grant the request of counsel for Fern Hallian's father.

IN SECRET CONFERENCE.

This fact has tended further to complicate the tangle occasioned by the love affair of the pretty eighteen-year-old daughter of an agent of a distillery who, after studying abroad, fell madly in love with Eisman, the family chauffeur, and eloped with him like the heroines she used to read about while at school.

At the Quincy court today the clerk refused to state what charge was mentioned in the application for a warrant there. He admitted that the matter was "still in the air."

Attorney M. J. Sughrue, counsel for Fern Hallian's father, and Attorney Thomas H. Buttimer, counsel for Louis Eisman, held an important conference at 9 a. m. today with Judge Pratt at the Bingham court.

The session was held in the judge's private office. It lasted an hour. Joseph Hallian, father of the girl, hurried in his touring car from the Hallian cottage at Hull to Bingham at an early hour, but did not attend the conference. Fern, still penitent, remained with her mother at Hull, where she has been very much in seclusion since she and Chauffeur Eisman were brought back from Portland last Saturday night.

At the close of today's conference with Judge Pratt counsel declined to give out any information. Chauffeur Eisman was not present. He is out on bail on the abduction charge.

GIRL TELLS OF THREAT.

The new charges lodged against Eisman and the subsequent developments in the case explain the visit to the woods off Forest avenue, Chelsea, last Sunday by Fern Hallian, her father, Attorney Sughrue and Chief Reynolds of the Hull police.

Fern Hallian claims Eisman took her into the woods and declares Eisman told her that if she did not marry him her father would do harm to them both. The girl says she was frightened by the chauffeur's remarks and ran off with him to get married.

Miss Hallian is reported to have shown her father and Chief Reynolds the place in the woods where the alleged threats were made and it was on the evidence contained in the girl's statement that the second warrant against Eisman was obtained.

Eisman is said to have denied the charges. He maintains the girl went away of her own accord. He is held in $1,000 and will be arraigned in the Hingham court on Monday on a charge of abduction.

Everything has been done to keep the new developments in the case a secret. The new charges have created a sensation in the seashore colony.

Mrs. Joseph H. Hallian declares the family has no intention of dropping the case.

Mrs. Hallian said the suit would be prosecuted to the limit of their resources. She refuses to listen to suggestions of marriage.

William J. Burns—with dictagraph receivers at his ears—and Mrs. Florence Carman, whose arrest, he says, was premature. He plunged into the case today with new vigor and said: "It is necessary to have absolute and incontrovertible evidence, and that we will have." He believes Celia Coleman, Mrs. Carman's colored cook, lied to protect her mistress.

WOMAN WHO WRITES OF GUILT DECLARES SHE FIRED AT DOCTOR

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—A woman who signs herself "N. A. D." has written Sheriff S. J. Pettit of Nassau, confessing the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey. "I tried to get Dr. Carman," she explained and expressed the utmost sympathy for Mrs. Bailey's family.

Mrs. Bailey was shot last week in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman, and Mrs. Florence Carman is under arrest charged with the murder. The letter reads:

For God's sake free Mrs. Carman. She is a good, honest woman. She did not commit this act. I fired the shot and I am glad of it. I tried to get Dr. Carman. I did not mean to hit Mrs. Bailey. I am sorry for her and her family and I intend to get Dr. Carman yet. I tried to get Dr. Carman. He knows the reason why and he knows who I am. Let him tell the authorities.

The letter was mailed at Station L in Brooklyn.

The county authorities at once began their investigation of the clew contained in this letter.

Another letter figured in the case today, a sad little note from Elizabeth Carman, nine-year-old daughter of the imprisoned woman, to her mother. This note read:

Dear Mama—We are thinking of you all the time. I don't quite know why you can't come home. If I don't see Mr. Pettit, I will write to him and ask him why you don't come.

Your loving daughter,
Elizabeth.

The childish scrawl was splashed and blurred by the little lonely girl's tears.

Mrs. Carman burst into tears when she read the letter. Earlier in the day, on being told that Celia Coleman, her colored maid, had been arrested as a material witness, she commented bitterly: "I suppose they will arrest my little girl next."

SAYS MAID'S STORY IS CHANGED.

District Attorney Smith took the colored woman, little custody after announcing that her first story of events in the Carman home on the night of the murder had been materially altered. The maid first said she was in the kitchen when the shot was fired. Now it is reported she says she was in her room upstairs, started down at the sound of the shot and was ordered upstairs by Mrs. Carman, whom she met on the stairs.

This testimony, if true, would damage Mrs. Carman's case as implying that she was downstairs when the shot was fired.

As against this blow, Mrs. Carman scored a victory today through the decision of acting Coroner Norton to hold her hearing Monday, against Dr.

THREE CUP YACHTS ARE OFF IN BIG OFFICIAL RACE

By HARRY C. THOMAS.

NEWPORT, R. I., July 10.—In the first official trial race in which all three racers have competed, the cup candidates Resolute, Vanitie and Defiance got away in close order today.

Defiance, the "hoodoo" yacht, was the first to cross the line. The Resolute was next and the Vanitie third. The time of the start was:

Defiance 12:30:15.
Resolute 12:30:22.
Vanitie 12:30:27.

The Resolute soon took the lead going in the windward direction, crossing the bow of the Vanitie.

The Defiance was sailed today by Captain Selah B. Howell, and in the heavy swell that spanked the boats, the tri-city syndicate's wooden-hulled yacht did not seem to make so much fuss as did the others.

Within a few minutes after the start of the race the wind hauled around to the south-south-east and drove in a fog that began to hide the yachts from observers ashore. The boats stood off on the ten mile windward thrash on the starboard tack, with the Resolute leading and the Defiance for to leeward.

By 10:45 all the yachts were on their way to the starting line under tow. At that time the wind was fattening out, but a heavy ground swell made the cup boats pitch and tumble.

On board the Vanitie was E. D. Morgan, who managed the Columbia in her palmy day of racing. The cup committee was aboard the Vanitie and the yachts were followed by a fleet of pleasure boats.

An hour later a dead calm prevailed and a signal that the race had been postponed for fifteen-minute intervals was hoisted.

At 12:45 the signal was set calling for a race of thirty miles. The course was triangular, ten miles to each leg, the first of which was a beat to windward. The wind freshened, and at 12:25 the warning signal was given, with the three yachts closely bunched in a luffing match.

OUT OF WORK, SHOOTS HIMSELF.
WATERVILLE, Me., July 10.—Scott Grant, aged 35, suffering from ill health and lack of work, shot himself in the right temple with a 32-caliber revolver today. His home was in Clinton.

REBELS TO ATTACK IRAPUATO NEXT.
WASHINGTON, July 10.—Confirmation of the fall of Guadalajara was received today at the Constitutionalist headquarters here. The next move of the Constitutionalists will be against Irapuato and Guanajuato.

REBELS PLAN FINAL CONQUEST

By W. J. MADDOX.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—That General Obregon will lead the revolutionary march on Mexico City following his victory at Guadalajara, and that Villa has abandoned his campaign against Mexico City, was the opinion expressed today by those in close touch with the Constitutionalists.

It was asserted the capture of Guadalajara makes the beginning of a new order in the rebel camp. It is not believed here, however, that Obregon will move until San Luis Potosi has been taken.

Word received here today predicts this will be accomplished within the next forty-eight hours. General Jesus Carranza, with 15,000 men, is reported under orders to take the town. General Obregon and Jesus Carranza, it is said, will have the task of putting the final stroke to the Constitutionalist military activities, with the former in supreme command.

Zapata's request for affiliation with Carranza will be granted, it is believed here, but there is little likelihood that Carranza will discontinue any attack upon the Mexican capital until the arrival there of General Obregon.

FEDERAL LOSS OF 7,000 MEN IN BATTLE OF GUADALAJARA

By JOHN W. ROBERTS.

GUADALAJARA, Mexico, July 10.—General Alvaro Obregon, who captured this city after a fight of forty-eight hours, sat up a Constitutional government today, ordered the hanging of the leaders of Federals slain in the battle and directed the execution of government soldiers who refuse to enlist under the revolutionary banner.

General Obregon estimated the number of Federal killed and wounded at 2,000. He has more than 5,000 prisoners and expects to capture the majority of the 5,000 others who took flight without arms and ammunition when it became certain that the city was doomed.

"Our victory has cut General Huerta off from escape from Manzanillo," said Obregon, as he sat at a table in the palace. "If he flees from the capital he will have to go to the eastward now."

"I expect momentarily to hear that Guaymas and Manzanillo have been taken by our troops. The deathknell of the assassin in the capital has been sounded."

FEDERAL TROOPS MASS TO DEFEND MEXICAN CAPITAL

MEXICO CITY, July 10.—Federal troops are pouring into the capital today. President Huerta is preparing for a final stand, and it is expected that within a week fully 40,000 well equipped soldiers will be quartered here.

Many of the large siege guns that were at San Luis Potosi when the revolutionists began their southern campaign have been brought here and placed in advantageous positions.

General Ribio Navarrete arrived from Jalapa with two train loads of troops early today. It is expected that he will act as second in command to Minister of War Blanquet in the defence of the capital.

General Garcia Pena, who has recently commanded the Xera Cruz division, has been ordered to join the army, making it possible to accede to him Foreign Minister, a post from which he might be elevated to the presidency, it is believed.

Sir Christopher Cradock, commander of the British ships on the East coast, arrived from Puebla today for a conference with Sir Lionel Carden. It is said that he will make arrangements for the landing of large force of British marines here when the rebels near the capital.

Railroad Freight Tariffs Held Up

WASHINGTON, July 10.—New tariffs on the Rio Grande railroad and the Western Pacific railroad cancelling through commodity rates on wool and mohair in carloads from points on these railroads to St. Louis and the Eastern seaboard via the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad and the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad today were suspended until January 31, 1915, by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The commission also suspended until January 23, 1915, new schedules filed by the Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie railway cancelling milling in transit and reloading privileges on grain and grain shipments at St. Croix Falls. Wis. advances in rates on buckwheat and corn flour from Western points to California terminals over railroads operating in that territory were suspended until January 18.

Irish Craft Exhibit to Close Tomorrow

GUYED TO BOSTON

By MORTON BIRGE.

I.—BOSTON COMMON

HART DEFENDS HAWTHORNE AS AN 'IMMORTAL'

Albert Bushnell Hart, professor of history and government at Harvard, today declared that he was at a loss to understand why the name of Nathaniel Hawthorne had been rejected from the list of "One Hundred Eminent Bostonians" just announced by the Special Columbus Day Committee of 1913.

"Boston, as a literary and commercial centre, is generally understood to embrace the territory within a hundred miles of the 'Hub' proper," said Professor Hart. "I am utterly at a loss to understand why, in the larger meaning of name 'Boston' Hawthorne's name should have been rejected by the committee.

"I should certainly place the name of Nathaniel Hawthorne among the first five in any list of 100 literary men and women of the country. In my estimation Hawthorne, as an essayist and a writer of imaginative literature, is second only to Ralph Waldo Emerson.

"Of course, Hawthorne was not a Bostonian in the strict sense of the word. This may have been the reason for his being rejected by the committee. Hawthorne, as everybody knows, lived mostly at Salem and abroad. Yet, in the popular mind, he is closely associated with Boston's claim to literary distinction. He undoubtedly imbibed some of the influence of Boston's literary coterie, and might properly be considered one of Boston's sons, in a literary sense.

"Hawthorne's 'Scarlet Letter' I consider to be one of the greatest works of imaginative literature of any age and in any language. That alone, in my judgment, would entitle Hawthorne's name to a niche in a national Hall of Fame. I see absolutely no reason for the committee's rejecting Hawthorne's name, except for the simple reason that he was a native of Salem."

Boston Common is the real estate man's idea of a wasted opportunity. It is the choicest tract of undeveloped dirt between Sullivan Square and the Dedham line. The real estate man gazes enviously across its 48 2-5 acres and pictures the colossal profits there and from the equivalent.

Part of Boston's subway puzzle sneaks along under the Common. The entrances thereto are housed by squat stone structures which have been happily styled "Public Library pups" from their resemblance in miniature to the famous architectural bookcase in Copley square.

The Common is shaped on top like a portercluse steak. Underneath it is rapidly being converted into a subterranean web-a cheese by the subway extensions, Cambridge tube and other borings of the Transit Commission.

The color tone of the Common is a combination of grass green, dirt brown, indefinite gray, except once a year when the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company holds its annual drum-head court martial and held day on the parade ground. Then the hectic undercurrent of the Ancients make the respectable old Common look like the Aurora Borealis doing a tango with the Battle of Waterloo.

Burglars Get $1,200 in Brookline House

Brookline police today are seeking the burglars who secured $1,200 worth of valuables from the house of Frank S. Donaldson, No. 24 Park street, Brookline.

Detroit Oil War Cuts Gasoline Price

DETROIT, July 10.—The war of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, against the Independent Companies, operating in Detroit, for the domination of the gasoline trade, which began a few months ago, has forced the prices of motor car fuel down to eleven cents a gallon, a drop of six cents.

WOMAN DYING, HOLD MAN WHO WOUNDED TRIO

WORCESTER, July 10.—Thomas H. Bombard, a mill hand, of No. 1478 Main street, was arraigned today for attempt to murder in connection with the shooting in the Pondsville mills in Auburn as a result of which two women and a man are expected to die.

Judge Samuel Utley held him in $6,000 bail till Thursday to see whether his victims live or die.

The wounded are:

Mrs. Eulda King, thirty-five, whom he wooed for three years, shot in forehead and lungs. Dying at hospital.

Erhardt Reithel, forty, shot in head. Dying at hospital.

Alma Reithel, eighteen, shot in right arm, hand and breast. On dangerous list at hospital.

Bombard is said to have been enraged because Mrs. King, a widow with three children, rejected him. All the victims lived in Auburn.

BOMBARD ARRESTED.

Bombard was arrested on Dead Horse Hill, in the rear of his home, by Patrolmen James F. Swan and Edward T. Butcher of the Worcester department. Bombard has a reputation as a good shot with a revolver and appeared much pleased when told that the bullet fired at Reithel entered his forehead.

"The fool butted in," he said. "I was going home to kiss mother goodbye," he added, "then I was going to 'beat it' for New York. I went to kill Mrs. King. I gave her five minutes to say her prayers and the fool 'hollered' for help."

Miss Reithel told Captain Patrick O'Day of the Worcester police detective bureau that she saw Bombard threatening Mrs. King with the revolver as she went from the office of the factory to see the time by the mill clock.

"Bombard was pointing the revolver at Mrs. King when I saw them," explained Miss Reithel. "I turned and ran back to the office to tell my father. Father hurried out and I followed. As father approached, Bombard turned, pointed the revolver at him and fired. Father fell at the first shot. He was not more than twelve feet away from Bombard. I dodged behind a loom machine and then heard another shot, as Bombard fired at Mrs. King.

GIRL TELLS OF SHOOTING.

"Next I met him coming along the loom alley where I was. He pointed the revolver at me and I raised my hand mechanically. The bullet passed through the palm and into my shoulder."

Miss Reithel turned and ran into the weaving room of the mill, where she passed to the roof and shouted an alarm to the men in the yard. The power was shut off and workmen went to catch the assailant. He held them off with the revolver and after firing two shots, walked along the road toward the Springfield-Worcester car line.

PROTESTS FAIL TO STOP BOUTS IN CAMBRIDGE

Despite the protests of Cambridge clergymen who ask Mayor Good to remove Thomas Shoer of Public Safety Henry Cunningham because he allows prize fights, the University A. C. will stage its usual boxing exhibitions in Cambridge tonight.

The police will not stop the bouts, but Commissioner Cunningham said:

"There will be the usual police guard, consisting of six patrolmen and a sergeant, stationed outside of the University Club. They will see that the law is not violated.

"We have had a police guard at former shows of the University Club, but as the law has not been violated we have not had any occasion to take any action."

Mayor Good today announced that the second hearing of the "wide open Cambridge" charges, brought by the ministers, would be held next Monday morning in his office in the City Hall at 10 o'clock. The ministers say they will surely produce evidence to back up their charges, and some startling developments are expected.

"U. S. Diplomatic Service a Joke"

NEW YORK, July 10.—"American diplomatic service is the laughing stock of Europe," declared T. T. Mallison, export manager of the Royal Typewriter Company, just returned from a twelve months' trip abroad. He said:

"Our diplomatic service is a joke. Some months ago I landed in Venezuela with two fellow commercial travellers. My baggage was opened, the contents scattered on the dock, and myself locked up for eight hours for daring to be a citizen of the United States. My fellow travellers received the courtesies due to respect for their governments.

"Yes, this matter was referred to our Department of State. As I have never heard from them, I assume the matter has been pigeon-holed, but then no one apparently cares for American business interests abroad, particularly no one connected with the present administration at Washington."

Revolutionists from China Coming

HONOLULU, July 10.—En route to the United States and Europe to stir up interest in the new revolutionary movement in China, Hwang Hsing, Minister of War, with two members of Dr. Sun's military staff and a secretary, are here. An enthusiastic public meeting of Chinese welcomed them.

Hwang Hsing said:

"The purpose of our trip is to lay before the world the exact facts as to conditions in China, which are worse under Yuan Shi Kai than they were under Manchu rule."

Charles F. Shute Dies in Malden

Charles F. Shute, one of Malden's wealthiest real estate owners, died today at his home at No. 240 Ferry street, Malden, at the age of seventy-six. Mr. Shute had been in the milk business. He was a member of Malden's first city government, serving as councilman in 1852 and 1883. He was a member of the State Legislature from 1892 till 1894. He is survived by a widow and six children.

PRESIDENT AND SENATE DEADLOCKED

WASHINGTON, July 10.—A revolt in the Senate against President Wilson is on. Members of the upper House have reached a deadlock with the White House on the President's demand that Paul M. Warburg and Thomas D. Jones be confirmed as members of the Federal Reserve Board.

The Senate Committee on Banking and Currency "stood pat" today on its unfavorable report on the nomination of Jones. Indefinite postponement of action in Warburg's case, with the same determination that characterized the White House statement that the President will insist that both appointees be approved.

On the other hand assurances have come to the White House from administration Senators that the President will be able to muster enough strength in the Senate to override the action of the Banking and Currency Committee should he persist in his determination to force the issue.

So strongly is President Wilson determined to stand by Warburg, that no other nomination will be sent by the White House to the Senate even though Warburg's name be pigeonholed indefinitely.

Warburg has placed himself entirely in the President's hands. He has not receded from his position that he will not submit to examination by the committee. He will permit the White House to do all it can to obtain his confirmation, but will make no fight in his own behalf.

Reports have reached Washington that the farmers of the Middle West, embittered against the Harvester Trust, through long experience, are strongly opposed to the confirmation of Jones.

Senator Weeks, of the Banking and Currency Committee, today declared that Warburg must submit to investigations by the committee.

"I make the prediction that the Senate will not abrogate its duty in this matter, but without regard to Mr. Warburg's merits, and I have a very high opinion of him and his ability, will insist that its request be observed," says Weeks.

Wilson Too Busy to Meet Cabinet

GREAT CROWD TO SEE NANTASKET FLIGHT OF WEBSTER SUNDAY

There are a quarter of a million people around Boston—the lucky quarter of a million who saw Clifford Webster fly at Revere last Saturday—who can't understand all this trouble up in Hammondsport in getting the big transatlantic plane "America" in shape so she will rise from the water as she should.

One man said today: "Why don't they let Webster try that flight? He didn't seem to have any difficulty in getting up out of the water."

Most of you have seen wild duck rise. Webster and his Burgess-Dunne plane rise just as easily. The wild duck flies for perhaps a hundred yards, its feet and wings touching the water, before it gets clear. Webster does a little farther before his pontoons begin to skip across the waves. And then he lifts as easily as the duck—lifts and circles and banks and dives and climbs above your heads—a marvelous vindication of the power of man to do anything he sets out to do.

HOME CITIES AWARDS SUNDAY.

And Webster is going to fly again at Nantasket next Sunday.

There probably aren't many people in Boston who haven't taken that wonderful ride down to Nantasket on the boats. The "Rose Standish" and the "South Shore" and the "Old Colony" household names—and they deserve it. The AMERICAN invites you all—you who have been there before and you who have yet to make that trip next Sunday for Webster is going to duplicate those flights which startled thousands at Revere.

And by the way, at Revere Webster dropped from his swinging, sweeping plane thousands of cards which advertised those lucky enough to get them into the AMERICAN'S Home Cities contest, one of the most unique competitions ever conducted in New England. The entries in that contest had to send their cards to the Promotion Department of the Boston AMERICAN, and they did so. Thousands of answers have come in. And—here is the point.

THE NAMES OF THE WINNERS OF THE AMERICAN'S HOME CITIES CONTEST WILL BE ANNOUNCED IN NEXT SUNDAY'S AMERICAN.

So all you contestants get an AMERICAN Sunday and see whether you were clever enough to win.

Now, to get back to next Sunday's flight. Webster will come up from Marshfield just as he did last Saturday. That is, he will come on the wing, flying high in the air, sliding through wind and weather as though he were greased. His big Burgess-Dunne plane thinks nothing of such small matters as a forty-mile hop.

He will come and treat you at Nantasket to a series of flights. He will fly not only over the beach but over Paragon Park. And just as he did last Saturday, he will drop cards among the throngs in the park and among the throngs on the Beach. Those cards—for those who get them—will bear a legend that—well, that will be explained more fully next Sunday. Buy the AMERICAN Sunday morning—or better still, order it today, for the Sunday AMERICAN has an annoying habit of being "sold out" about 9 o'clock Sunday morning. Get an AMERICAN somehow next Sunday, and you will find in it full details of this newest contest which the AMERICAN has planned.

PLEASURES OF THE BEACH.

Even if you are not clever enough to win one of the awards in this contest you will be glad you made the trip. For in the first place there will be Webster's wonderful flights, and in the second place there will be the beautiful steamship ride—the most delightful ride, many believe, that Boston Harbor offers, and in the third place there will be Paragon Park with its usual myriad attractions, doubled and redoubled by the special program Manager George A. Dodge has consented to arrange for this day, and finally there will be the beach itself—which can hardly be equalled elsewhere along the coast.

Manager Dodge says the program he has in mind will surpass anything he has ever arranged for the Park—which is saying a good deal, as you who go often to Paragon Park can testify.

The Nantasket Steamship Company will also arrange a special steamer service to take care of the tremendous crowds that may be expected. It will be a great big happy family of vacationists and picnickers on the boats and at the beach.

The exact time of Webster's flight is not yet assured. But it will not be before 2 o'clock—according to present plans, and it will not be after 8 o'clock. Thus you will have plenty of time Sunday morning to get an AMERICAN and find out all about what is planned, then to take one of the steamships—and one is as delightful as another—and go down to Nantasket; then to have a good hour or so in Paragon Park, and finally to see the flights and get home in ample time, before the dusk falls.

STABLE AS AN AUTOMOBILE.

Webster's flights will be worth seeing and more—as you who were at Revere last Saturday do not need to be told. The Burgess-Dunne plane that he flies is the latest thing in aeroplane construction—and goes beyond anything ever before built in that it is stable as an automobile. There is no more danger of its turning turtle, or tipping backward or forward, than there is of an automobile.

In an automobile, safety depends on the driver; but in this Burgess-Dunne plane almost anyone, with a moment's instruction, could go aloft and keep right side up, and land again in the water.

It is easy enough to do this, but Webster goes further. It is his job to take the planes turned out at the Marblehead factory, and when they are still stiff and jerky with newness, to fly them till all the cranky places are smoothed out.

Naturally, that makes him an expert in a good plane, and when he is in the air you will appreciate that he can go further than the man with the automobile who bragged that it would "run, walk, lie down and roll over, bark like a dog, sing, or do anything else but climb a tree."

Webster can do all those things—and he can climb a tree, too. And if you don't believe it, come to Nantasket and see!

Men Must Acquire Shapes, Tailors of the Nation Decide

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. July 10.—Goodness, us fellows won't know ourselves if the National Association of Clothing Designers, which convenes here today, has its way. Fall suits are to be so tight in certain places that it will be hard to tango and practically impossible to dip.

Lines of beauty are to be all the go and if a fellow is short on curves he simply will have to pad. Sleeves will be full at the top to indicate biceps but narrow at the wrist with just enough room for the wrist. Blue dress suits are ding urged.

Byron Chandler Will Appeal from Alimony Decision

Byron D. Chandler, the "Million Dollar Kid," intends to appeal from the decree handed down by Judge Weeks in the New York Supreme Court, demanding that he pay his wife, Grace La Rue, the actress, $50 a week alimony and $500 for counsel fees, pending the outcome of her suit for separation.

He admitted this much as he was leaving the Public Library with Miss Helene L. Nelson, a Back Bay milliner. He said he had instructed his attorneys in New York to appeal from the decision. The ruling of Judge Weeks did not please him, although he is apparently not worrying about the suit.

BARLATO FOUND SLAIN; WIFE AND DIVAIO SOUGHT

The police throughout New England today joined in the hunt for Mrs. Gaetano Barlato and Gaetano Divaio in the E. Cabot street, Beverly, as a result of the finding of the body of Gaetano Barlato in Foster's Field, Beverly.

The recovery of the body partially corroborates the story told the police by Mrs. Gaetano Divaio when she reported the disappearance of her husband and Mrs. Barlato. Divaio and Mrs. Barlato have been gone since Monday. It is thought Barlato was slain on July 4.

A description of the fugitives has been sent to the immigration officials so that it is hoped to intercept the man and woman before they can leave the country. Mrs. Barlato is said to have taken her infant baby with her.

Today an autopsy will be performed upon Barlato's body, which was found in a clump of bushes on the side of a hill in Foster's Field, about a quarter of a mile in from Grove street in the Montserrat section of Beverly by Arthur Stafford and his sister, Miss Freida Stafford.

Six deep stab wounds were in the back. One directly behind the heart probably caused death.

Chief Woodberry declared that a struggle had undoubtedly taken place before the man lost his life by being stabbed in the back. It was his belief that Barlato and his companions were walking in the field when Barlato was stabbed in the back.

Laborers Lose Full Day for Half Day Pay

BROCKTON, July 10.—Twenty-five laborers employed by the Sewer Department struck for a day because they were not given a half-day's pay for July 4. The Sewerage Construction Commissioners agreed to give the men the half-day's pay, but docked them a day for striking.

Shadow Dances by Society Girls at Drexel Fete

PARIS, July 10.—A feature of Antony J. Drexel's dinner dance was the latest Parisian craze for flimy tulle skirts with charmeuse tunics. Their transparency reveals hose of spider texture of darker hue than the skirt. The general result is to give a much more undraped effect than if the wearers appeared in silk fleshings.

Mrs. Angle Begs to Relate Ballou Story in Public

STAMFORD, Ct., July 10.—Important developments are looked for in the inquest of Waldo R. Ballou's death today. Coroner Phelan will be here and if Dr. Bruce Weaver, the State expert, is ready to testify to the analysis he has been making of certain exhibits the coroner will hear him. Mrs. Helen M. Angle is now desirous of telling her story to Coroner Phelan in public. Mrs. Angle said today her father was one of his visitors.

"Daddy, I'm afraid if this suspense does not end pretty soon you will break down. I do wish you would speak to Judge Downs and get him to consent to me testifying before the coroner. I don't want to testify in private. I would rather tell my story in public. Please try and persuade Judge Downs."

Freed from Wife Who Posed Nude

NEW YORK, July 10.—Victor Harvey Briggs, wealthy publisher, will not have to pay any more alimony to Charlotte Davies Briggs, the youthful wife, who astonished him by posing nude for "Miss Innocence," and allowing the pictures to be copied for sale. Justice Weeks has granted Briggs an annulment of the marriage.

CABOT WILL PROTESTED BY MRS. BRIGGS

Mary Cabot Briggs, wife of Dr. L. Vernon Briggs of Beacon street, today died in the Norfolk Superior Court an appeal against allowing the will of her father, the late Louis Cabot of Milton. The will was allowed by Judge Flint on June 24.

Under the will Cabot cut off his two daughters, Mrs. Briggs and Mrs. Charlotte H. Bartol, leaving all his property, consisting of $700,000 in real estate and $1,200,000 in personal property, in trust to Augustus Hemenway and his sons, Henry R. Cabot and George E. Cabot, to be held for his grandchildren.

Mrs. Briggs, in her appeal, charges: That the will was not properly executed, according to law, that her father was not of sound mind, that the will was procured by fraud or undue influence of Charlotte H. Bartol, John W. Bartol, Edward F. Woodward and George E. Cabot, or either or some of them, acting individually or jointly, that the will prepared for probate was procured by fraud or undue influence.

Angela Morgan in Demand as Reader of Her Own Poems

NEW YORK, July 10.—Great interest is being shown by prominent literary people in readings by Miss Angela Morgan of her own poems. Miss Morgan has recently been in demand at resorts in and about New York. Last night she gave a reading at the home of Mrs. Frank Potter, at Katonah, N. Y.

Saugus Man Dying, Police Think Auto Crashed Into Him

Harold L. Holt of No. 31 Ballard street, East Saugus, is dying at the Frost Hospital, Chelsea, from a fractured skull as the result of a peculiar accident on the Revere Beach Parkway, near Elliot Circle. Holt was riding a motorcycle, and it is supposed he was struck by an automobile as he was crossing the bridge over the Narrow Gauge tracks.

A citizen says he saw an automobile stopped nearby, its driver and only occupant looking back. He shouted to the man to come and help. They refused and drove on.

NO OTHER WOMEN SO JEALOUS AS DOCTORS' WIVES, DOROTHY DIX DECLARES

"ACCUSED WOMAN TYPICAL"

By DOROTHY DIX.

One of the most curious sidelights on the tragedy in which Mrs. Louise Bailey was shot to death in the office of her physician, is the startling revelation it makes of the well known psychological fact that no other women on earth are so generally, so insanely and so unreasonably jealous as doctors' wives.

Mrs. Carman, in whose house Mrs. Bailey was killed by some unknown assassin, is just an exaggerated type of the physician's wife, one who had the courage of her suspicious curiosity. She did what many another doctor's wife would have done had she dared when she installed a dictophone in his office so that she might hear all that went on in it.

"Women would come to see my husband, and they would go in his office and the door would be shut, and I wanted to know just what was said and done behind those closed doors," Mrs. Carman has admitted, and she has also confessed to having spied on her husband and his patients through the same window through which the shot was fired that killed Mrs. Bailey, and to having rushed in an attacked an elderly woman to whom she saw the doctor giving money.

Nor does this case stand alone. There are others.

A TYPICAL CASE.

One of the most eminent surgeons in New York, who was sued by his wife for divorce last Winter, told to his intimates a story of martyrdom from the persecutions of a jealous wife. He had success, fame, two lovely children, a beautiful home, but his wife's utterly unwarranted suspicions were the trail of the serpent over his Eden. She listened at keyholes, she surprised him in office consultations; she had him shadowed by detectives, and she took his fierce resentment of these indignities as a confession of guilt, and made scenes that humiliated him into the dust until he put an end to an intolerable situation by leaving her.

More than one physician's wife has said to me:

"I know it is foolish. I have every reason to believe in my husband's honor and his affection for me, but, to save my life, I can't keep from being eaten up with jealousy about him. I nearly go mad when I think that he spends his days going from one charming woman, all dilked up in pink silk and lace negligees, to another, and that he has to hold their hands and look sympathetic and coo over them. What does he say to them? What do they say to him? And he won't tell me."

And into these women's eyes come the look that might have been in Mrs. Carman's eyes when she bought her dictaphone and when she peered through the window of his office.

Of course there isn't any woman without a green streak in her nature, but, with most wives, this is so deeply buried under strata of common sense and self-complacency and years of domesticity on the part of their particular Johns, that it takes an obvious and cataclysmic manifestation of interest by the husbands in some other woman to bring it to the surface.

DOCTORS' WIVES GREEN.

Doctors' wives, however, appear to be all green. They seem to be made up entirely of suspicions, and fears, and dreads, and to regard all of their husband's female patients, be they as old as the Witch of Endor and as homely as a Gorgon, as so many rivals and menaces to their peace and happiness.

In this they do both their husbands and the other women a great injustice. To the average woman her physician is as impersonal a source of healing and comfort as her priest and is she often confides to him the sorrows of her soul as well as the ills of her body, it is because, for one thing he is paid to listen; for another thing that he is sworn to secrecy by every law of ethics in his profession, and, for another thing, that the interrelation of the mental and physical state is such that the competent doctor must know what his patient is thinking, as well as doing, in order to effect a cure, or treat her intelligently.

But, naturally, the woman patient doesn't want her doctor's wife to be regaled with her private history, or to have a peek in at her family skeleton. Her confidences are not meant for the man, but the physician.

Nor is there any reason why physicians' wives should be any more jealous of their patients than that a lawyer's wife should get green-eyed over his women clerks, or a business man's wife have hysterics because her husband dictates letters to a girl stenographer. Nevertheless they do.

The doctor's wife argues that he sees his patients under more or less romantic circumstances, when the languid ladies are dilked up in fetching lingerie and ribbons, and that it is up to a physician, who knows which side of his bread is buttered and has jam on it, to coddle these invalids and flatter them and jolly them along the way of big bills.

That may be true professionally, but what the wives forget is that if doctors see women in their most attractive guise in one way, they see them in their most disillusioning state in another. It is doctors who deal with the hysterical woman, the neurotic woman, the fool woman, and it is literally true that if there is any man on earth that beholds the feminine sex without its halo it is a member of the medical profession.

As a plain matter of fact, very, very few doctors are flirtatious. They get enough of feminine society and feminine wiles in their business.

EVIDENCE AGAINST AND FOR MRS. CARMAN

POINTS AGAINST ACCUSED:

Her admitted jealousy, which caused her to install a dictagraph in her husband's office.

Her attack on Mrs. Elizabeth Variance, on whom she spied through the same window through which Mrs. Bailey was shot.

The testimony of Elwood T. Bardes, who saw a woman like Mrs. Carman walk from the window after the murder.

The finding of a box of .38 cartridges in the attic where the dictagraph was hid. (Mrs. Bailey was shot with a .38 bullet.)

Mrs. Carman's removal of the dictagraph at daybreak after the murder.

Her attempt to conceal the dictagraph.

The testimony of her nine-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, that Mrs. Carman ordered her to stop playing the piano on the night of the killing (music interferes with the dictagraph).

The Carman house was virtually surrounded by neighbors, who heard the shot, but saw no one flee.

A woman in white was seen to enter Dr. Carman's office shortly after the shooting.

Forty minutes or more elapsed before the authorities were notified, giving time to rehearse a plausible story.

The screen on Dr. Carman's office was opened from the inside before the shooting.

Witnesses said they saw Mrs. Carman about the ground floor of her home shortly before the murder.

POINTS FOR MRS. CARMAN:

The inability of the police to establish an unquestioned motive.

Their failure to prove Dr. Carman and Mrs. Bailey were anything but virtual strangers.

Their inability to find a 38-calibre revolver in or about the Carman home.

Dr. Carman's testimony that the revolver used to kill Mrs. Bailey was fired by a man who was left-handed. Mrs. Carman is right-handed.

Mrs. Carman's testimony that she did not use the dictagraph on that night.

The testimony of every member of the Carman family, and of the servant, that Mrs. Carman was in bed when the shooting occurred.

The testimony of the negro maid, that no one left or entered by the rear door at or about the time of the murder.

The admission of George Golder, Jr., a star witness, that he had mistaken Mrs. Ida Powell, Mrs. Carman's sister, for Mrs. Carman, on the night of the murder, and that it was not Mrs. Carman who walked through the first floor of the house a few minutes before the murder.

The story of Sidney Schoss that he saw a woman run from the side of the house after the shooting and flee in an automobile.

Mrs. Carman's own character, home-loving, refined, intellectual and of the highest respectability.

couldn't tell Mrs. Carman and Mrs. Powell apart.

DISCREDITS BARDES.

"He came to me last night and in the most dejected manner possible told me he wanted to sign an affidavit and take back what he had said, as his story was not correct.

"Bardes—well, two women will swear he could not have been where he said he was at the time. With this testimony eliminated, they have not a leg to stand on. My wife will be free within a week."

Mrs. Carman was attended by Mrs. Pettit, wife of Sheriff Pettit, as Mrs. Hulse, the warden's wife, was away. Her breakfast consisted of an orange, two fried eggs, fried potatoes and coffee.

She had her dinner in the middle of the day and said she felt hungry. She ate a vegetable soup, beef hoch, kidney beans, boiled potatoes, apple pie and tea.

"The prison fare is excellent and Mrs. Carman said she did not need outside food," her husband said. "Anything she wanted she shall have, but she fared excellently today."

While she spent most of the day in bed, she slept only for half an hour late in the afternoon.

FOE OF DOCTOR CARMAN SAYS HE IS PERSECUTED

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—Aid of the postoffice authorities has been invoked by Mrs. Thomas H. Evans, wife of Dr. Evans of Freeport, L. I., to combat the latest form taken by the series of mysterious persecutions undergone by Dr. and Mrs. Evans ever since, four years ago, the physicians succeeded in carrying out, single handed, against great opposition, reforms in the health condition in that town, which resulted in the removal for neglect of duty of Dr. Edwin Carman as the State health authorities from his office as health officer.

Mrs. Evans said that Dr. Evans' mail has been tampered with. Letters containing checks and valuable contracts have been lost or mislaid, she asserted, and so much annoyance caused that she determined to call in federal aid.

When Mrs. Evans took up the matter with the local authorities she declared, several anonymous threats were received by her through the mails. These threats have been forwarded by her to Washington.

That the telephone wires leading to the Evans home in Freeport have been tapped and some person is listening to all conversations carried on over their line is another charge of Mrs. Evans. This last annoyance has developed, she says, since the murder of Mrs. Bailey in Dr. Carman's office.

Mrs. Evans says that she believes these latest events are the work of the same mysterious clique through whose agency Dr. Evans was twice assaulted during his crusade, once with such serious results that his life was for some time in danger; the Evans home was three times placed in jeopardy from fires, said to have been of incendiary origin; the Evans' motorboat was sunk, and Mrs. Evans beaten by a man who was choking, Dr. Evans while Freeport residents stood watching without making any move to help them.

"Ever since Dr. Evans started to improve the health conditions of Freeport," Mrs. Evans said, "our lives have been in danger, and we have suffered persecutions that have resulted in the serious impairment of my husband's health."

BURNS INTIMATES MRS. CARMAN'S ARREST CAME PREMATURELY

NEW YORK, July 10.—"Mrs. Carman's arrest at this time does not mean anything," said William J. Burns, the detective, today. "It will make no difference under present conditions whether she is released after her examination on Monday. This is a case in which it is necessary to have absolute and incontrovertible evidence and that we will have."

He intimated that Mrs. Carman's arrest may have been a little premature. He added he did not intend to criticize any of the Freeport authorities.

"One trouble with this investigation is that there is too much publicity in the matter," said Burns. "Certain persons are going to get themselves into a heap of trouble if they don't quit interfering in the Freeport situation."

The detective said that he meant persons who are interesting themselves in behalf of Dr. and Mrs. Carman in an effort to clear up the situation. He denied he had gone to Freeport with his mind already made up that Mrs. Carman was guilty, a statement which has been credited to Dr. Carman.

He said that Celia Coleman, the negro servant in the Carman household, had not told the truth when she said she did not see Mrs. Carman in the kitchen about the time Mrs. Bailey was shot, and that he would be able to show that fact later on. He would not discuss the testimony of E. T. Bardes.

BARDES, HELD AS A WITNESS, IS UNABLE TO FURNISH BAIL

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—Elwood T. Bardes, the insurance agent whose testimony that he heard the shot that killed Mrs. Louise Bailey, and that he later saw a woman near the window through which the shot was fired resulted in Mrs. Carman's arrest, is held in $2,000 bail as a material witness. He has been unable to furnish bail and is in the Mineola jail, where Mrs. Carman is lodged.

CHILD SUFFERED WITH SKIN TROUBLE

Looked Awful. Rough and Red. Skin Would Break and Itch. Very Painful. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Completely Healed.

31 Unit St., Providence, R. I.—"My child's face looked awful. It was all scurvy, rough and red and you could peel it off. The skin would break and itch and she would cry with it. It was so painful. She suffered like that for about two months and it would itch so that she would scratch and rub it off.

"I tried different things until one day my husband said, 'Why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Ointment?' That same day I wrote for a sample and then my husband bought some more Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I put the Cuticura Ointment on her face, left it for a half hour and then washed it with Cuticura Soap. That night she rested fine and the next day was looking much better. I kept it up and within three or four weeks they completely healed her.

"Every time I combed my hair it would come out in handfuls. I rubbed the Cuticura Ointment into the scalp night and morning for three weeks and used the Cuticura Soap in shampooing. Now I can comb my hair all the time and I will not have a single hair on the comb." (Signed) Mrs. Emma Arthur Collins, Jan. 28, 1914.

Samples Free by Mail

Although Cuticura Soap (25c.) and Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are sold by druggists and dealers throughout the world, a sample of each, with 32-p. Skin Book will be sent free upon request. Address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

DR. CARMAN VISITS JAIL TO PRESCRIBE FOR WIFE

By VIOLA RODGERS.

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—So ill that it was necessary to have Dr. Guy F. Cleghorn prescribe for her, Mrs. Florence Carman remained on her prison cot nearly all day yesterday. She wore a kimono over her nightrobe and occasionally arose and moved about noiselessly, looking out of the barred windows which face cool stretches of lawn back of the court house.

Dr. Cleghorn was her first visitor. He came at 10:45 and remained until 11:30. Before Dr. Cleghorn left Dr. Carman arrived with some bromide of potassium and a teathermometer.

"I found," said Dr. Cleghorn, "that Mrs. Carman is highly nervous. I would not call it a breakdown but a reaction. I have ordered a mild tonic and a light diet with no meat. We found her heart action strong, so there is nothing grave to fear."

"SHE IS INNOCENT."

No more picturesque jail can be found than at Mineola. It looks like an old ivy-covered manse. Instead of moldy walls, the bright green ivy conceals a modern stone sanitary structure. Only bars suggest imprisonment.

Mrs. Carman is able to look out upon the ivy-covered court house about 200 feet away. All about are open spaces filled with trees, lawns and flowers.

"Mrs. Carman couldn't be more comfortable under the circumstances," said Dr. Carman at the entrance to the jail. "Every consideration is shown her and she is cheerful and has a good appetite."

Asked if Mrs. Carman felt depressed, the doctor straightened himself up and said:

"My wife is innocent. No jury on earth would hold her with the evidence in hand. The two chief witnesses at the hearing have both been discredited. Golder did not realize what he was saying when he told that garbled story of his visit to my office. He was so muddled that he is a stomach, liver and kidney tonic—by assisting the stomach to assimilate, the liver to filter, the kidneys to act—the poisons are removed, the red blood corpuscles are increased and one feels light, fresh and active instead of logy, dull and heavy. The "Discovery" stimulates the stomach, increases action of heart and arteries and is a most satisfactory alterative in blood-taints of any character. The refreshing influence of this extract of native medicinal plants has been favorably known for over forty years. Everywhere some neighbor can tell you of the good it has done.

A Human Churn

WHEN the food reaches the stomach it is subjected to a peculiar churning movement by the muscular walls of the stomach"—(See Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, page 45). In the liver, kidneys and skin, the blood is purified of its waste materials—these organs act as human filters, leaving the blood pure and clear—unless liver, digestive tract and kidneys are clogged.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Sold by all medicine dealers in liquid or tablet form; or send 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y., a trial box will be mailed you.

'I'LL POINT OUT SLAYER,' DOCTOR SAYS

CARMAN IS TRAILED BY BURNS MEN

protests of District Attorney Smith. The State officials wanted the hearing to go over for a week. Attorney Levy, representing Mrs. Carman, demanded she be brought to court on Monday as at first arranged. He believes he will be able to shatter the evidence so that Mrs. Carman will be released.

REOPEN CONTROVERSY.

Against District Attorney Smith's protest, Norton said today: "There is no chance of the examination not taking place on Monday." Thereupon a bitter controversy was reopened between the acting coroner and the other authorities. The District Attorney professed himself confident of the strength of his case. He charged attempts had been made to influence witnesses, threatened to prosecute in these cases, and added:

"While some of the witnesses at the inquest may prove weaker for the State than their testimony would indicate, we are convinced that others will change their stories, and that these changes will more than offset any loss."

Mrs. Carman in the jail today reiterated her protestations of innocence. During the morning Mrs. Pettit, the sheriff's wife, read aloud to her from "To Have and to Hold." At one passage Mrs. Carman commented:

"That seems just like Edwin and me. Twenty years ago we plighted our troth, swore to honor and obey one another, and drank from the same cup to bind our pledge."

Dr. Carman, meanwhile, was working with might and main in his wife's behalf. He said:

"We have found the trail which leads to the real murderer.

"I am going to save my wife. I have engaged private detectives and have given up my practice to work night and day on this case. My wife never killed Mrs. Bailey. She is as innocent as I.

PROMISES TO NAME "SLAYER."

"We have discovered wonderful evidence — evidence which will astound the community.

"I myself will point out the real slayer to the police."

Dr. Carman was asked whether he was working with detective William J. Burns. He replied: "No, Mr. Burns is on my trail again. He was with us tonight.

"Personally, I have all I want of Burns. He is a braggart, and the most ostentatious dispenser of hot air that ever lived. I have no objection to him finding the murderer; I hope he does. But he must not come to my house in a spirit of enmity.

"Today two of his men attached themselves to me, and they have been with me ever since. They are welcome.

"My wife is innocent, and will go free. The District Attorney has no evidence that Grand Jury would inspect. He knows that.'

Dr. Carman's statementand rumors about today developed a new sensation in the case—the fact that another woman is now strongly suspected, and that she may be arrested within two days.

OTHER WOMAN IN CASE.

This woman, whose name is freely mentioned by Mrs. Carman's partisans, is said to have been a close friend of the family, and it is asserted that under the cloak of friendship she coveted the affection of Dr. Carman, and was even more jealous than Mrs. Carman of his acquaintance with his patients.

This woman, the neighbors say, was madly infatuated with Dr. Carman. Some of them say that the woman may at any moment come to the front with a dramatic statement that will clear Mrs. Carman of all suspicion. This say, will be the next sensation in this startling case.

The popular belief that Mrs. Carman will shortly be freed was emphasized in a statement from Acting Coroner Norton, the man who ordered her arrest. Coroner Norton acted in accordance with the facts, and feels he was forced to order the arrest, but he said:

CORONER DOUBTFUL.

"As a man and not as an official, I cannot help feeling that Mrs. Carman is a remarkable woman and not the kind one could believe capable of carrying out such a crime. It must be remembered the facts brought out at the coroner's inquest could not all be elicited in a court trial. There were no rules of evidence. Mrs. Carman was not represented by counsel. At a trial, all would be different. Much of the evidence would be excluded. Also, there would be cross-examination of the witnesses such as was not allowed at the inquest."

The officials laid emphasis today on a new aspect of the case which will be emphasized at the trial. That is the nature of the wound that killed Mrs. Bailey.

The bullet struck her high in the back. It bored downward through her body and lodged in the chest muscles below the heart.

Therefore, it must have come from a point above and behind her.

NEW DOUBT RAISED.

But if it was fired from the point in the window where the glass was broken, and if Mrs. Bailey was standing up as has been stated, then the bullet would have bored UPWARD through her body. For the window is at least three feet below the level of her shoulders.

The conclusion, Mrs. Carman's friends claim, is irresistible that if the bullet came from the window, Mrs. Bailey was sitting or lying down when it was fired, and if it did not come from the window—then the whole investigation must begin at the beginning again.

It is not now expected that Mrs. Carman will be allowed to testify before the Grand Jury. District Attorney Smith said:

"I do not think she will testify. If she were called, she would not be placed under oath; but I do not think it advisable to call her."

TRACE SLIP OF PAPER.

The District Attorney explained that his office is working on a new line. He is tracing the little slip of yellow paper which Mrs. Carman, according to Gaston Boissonault, manager of the General Acoustic Company, said she showed him when she came to hire a dictagraph.

This slip of paper, according to Boissonault, contained, in addition to a penciled notation of the dictograph company's address, the two initials and the surname of some person and an address on West Thirty-second street. Boissonault could not recall the name except that it was "A large number."

It was when this was mentioned to the district attorney that it was explained that "a large number" would indicate the address to be far west on 32d street, and that was the district of the notorious "Hudson Duster" and "Gopher" gangs that Mr. Smith said:

"Yes, and I may tell you this is one of the most important clews we are working on."

The authorities consider the "gunman" clew of great value for the prosecution as opening a possible means of substantiating the allegation of an unknown man detailed by the police who alleges he and a "Joe Anderson," supposed to be in Kansas City, were hired by Mrs. Carman to do the shooting. This man alleged that, at the last minute, she decided herself to fire the shot which killed Mrs. Bailey.

MAY PROSECUTE GOLDER.

With the evidence of Bardes that he saw a woman who looked like Mrs. Carman near the window just after the shooting discredited by other witnesses who say Bardes was not there at the time, the District Attorney also finds the story of another witness damaged.

This man was George Golder. Golder said he had "guessed" at the testimony he gave at the inquest.

CLARENCE MACKAY ESCAPES DUTY ON THE CARMAN JURY

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—Clarence H. Mackay, president of the Commercial Cable Company, was to have been a member of the Grand Jury in the case of Mrs. Florence Carman, but he has gone to Europe. The members are:

Raymond E. Cheshire, thirty-eight years, of Syosset (foreman); Charles A. Vandale, Syosset; Daniel B. Raynor, Freeport; Treadwell P. Elder; and William J. Hegger, Hempstead; George V. Bailey (no relative of the murdered woman), James Casey, Glen Head; Herman A. Darling and James B. Bryce, Oyster Bay; Ernest T. Jahrens and Edwin C. Willetts, Mineola; Herman H. Baer, New Hyde Park; Samuel T. Hewlett, Rosiyn; Wallace R. Verrity, Wantagh; John H. Hahn, Hicksville; Joseph W. Hicks, Little Neck; Andrew Weston, Lawrence; Edward C. Floyd-Jones, Sea Cliff; Samuel D. Abrams, Inwood; William E. Coles, Manhasset; Alvah E. Smith, Bellmore; Albert H. Berg, East Meadow, and John T. Davison, Rockville Centre.

In the list are five merchants, four farmers, four real estate dealers, three contractors, three retired business men, a florist, a broker, a banker and a boarding house keeper. The average age of the jurors is forty-eight years.

SISTER OF ACCUSED WOMAN AT BEDSIDE OF DYING MOTHER

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—The home of Dr. Edwin Carman, from the outside, has a perfectly normal aspect today. Several friends of the family called and remained a short time. Mrs. Ida Powell, sister of Mrs. Carman, obtained leave of absence at the First National Bank, where she works as assistant bookkeeper.

She alone of all the family was not present when Mrs. Carman was placed under arrest. Today, however, she remained at home to take her sister's place at the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Platt Conklin, who is gravely ill. Old Mr. Conklin was seen hurrying toward the station. He said his wife felt "very bad," and that he was on his way to call a nurse to the house.

MRS. CARMAN PARTLY RECOVERS FROM HER NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—Mrs. Florence Carman in the Mineola jail has partially recovered from her nervous outbreak of yesterday.

Her pulse was still high today, and she was on a strict diet. Physicians, including her husband, saw her during the day.

She cries much of the time, but not in the wild and hysterical fashion of her first day in jail. Mrs. Hulse, the warden's wife, is with her much of the time, and is the only special guard assigned to her.

She begs continually for news of her mother, Mrs. Conklin, who is on the point of death.

OFFICIALS DISCREDIT CARMAN STORY OF GUNMAN NEWMAN

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—Meyer D. Newman, who calls himself Duke De Leon, and whose boasting that he is a gangster and gunman led to his arrest on a charge of carrying weapons in violation of the Sullivan law, is in the Mineola jail awaiting sentence. He faces a term of seven years or more in prison.

He lives in The Bronx, and charged that Mrs. Carman hired a gunman named Anderson to kill Mrs. Bailey, promised to pay $50, and that he, Newman, was offered a share in help. When he did not get his share he "snitched."

His story is utterly discredited by the officials and all concerned with the case.

WIFE WHO LEFT BARDES REPORTED ILL FROM SHOCK

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 10.—Mrs. E. T. Bardes, who has left her husband, the principal witness against Mrs. Carman, was reported ill today. Her husband's connection with the Carman case proved such a shock to Mrs. Bardes that she collapsed and since yesterday has been confined to her bed.

Bardes is well known in Long Island City. In September, 1912, he married Miss Sadie Moran of No. 18 Pierson street and took her to live at No. 472 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn. He said he was connected with the Acorn Roofing Company of Brooklyn, but his brother-in-law, James D. Moran, said today that he had never been able to locate the offices of the firm.

Moran joined Bardes about a year ago in establishing the Bardes-Moran Roofing Company, with offices at No. 401 Broadway, Long Island City. Moran put more than $2,000 in the business, he says, but broke partnership last February when it became necessary to increase his investment if the firm were to be kept going.

A month later Mrs. Bardes left her husband, returned to the home of her mother and brother and after that the Moran family lost track of Bardes.

TRAMP IS HELD AS MATERIAL WITNESS IN CARMAN CASE

FREEPORT, L. I., July 10.—Frank Farrell, the tramp, who claims, that after asking for something to eat at the Carman home on the night of the murder, he "hung around" and saw the same woman described by Elwood T. Bardes as walking away from the house, is held in the Mineola jail on $1,000 bond as a witness.

He has admitted, it is said, that he was drunk on the night of the murder. Attorney Levy, representing Mrs. Carman, laughed at Farrell's story.

Coroner Doubts Strength of Case Against Mrs. Carman

Acting Coroner Norton of Freeport, L. I., whose order resulted in the arrest of Mrs. Florence Carman, made this remarkable statement today:

I cannot help feeling * * * that Mrs. Carman * * * is not the kind of woman one could believe capable of carrying out such a crime. * * * The facts brought out at the coroner's inquest were elicited in a manner not possible in a court trial. * * * Much of the evidence * * * could not get on the record at all. Also there would be cross-examination of witnesses.

Mrs. Carman's Jail Is One Where Women Danced Nearly Nude

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 10.—Nassau County Jail at Mineola, where Mrs. Carman is incarcerated, is the most social prison on Long Island. Only a few weeks ago half a dozen keepers were arrested and sent to prison following the exposure of orgies in the jail, in which the women prisoners entertained their guards.

Strict watch has been kept on the part of the jail where Mrs. Carman is held. It is there most of the night, parties with women prisoners were held.

The woman declared they were released from their cells and taken on joy rides by the keepers.

Afterward dances known as the butterfly dip were indulged in by the women and their keepers in the prison, during which the women were compelled to discard most of their clothing.

The conviction of the keepers has resulted in an upheaval in the prison regulations. No favors are allowed there and a close watch is kept to see the rules are rigidly enforced.

Efforts were made to have the authorities let Mrs. Carman have some furniture from her home. It is believed she will be permitted to have one rocking chair and a rug on the floor.

WOMEN'S FEET LARGER? WELL, YES AND NO

Are Boston women's feet growing larger?

Attendants at the seventh National Shoe and Leather Market Fair in Mechanics Building answer the question by declaring larger shoes are being worn by women and the character of work now being done by many women tends to make their feet larger.

Are Boston Women's Feet Growing Larger?

Yes.

John T. Fitzpatrick, of J. L. French Company:

I am of the opinion Boston women's feet are growing larger. We have more shafstent calls for larger sized shoes. Women rather wear the shoes that are correctly old and pinch their feet. They want to be comfortable and they can get larger shoes without destroying the beauty of this organ of the body.

Harry Unsely, of Holander, Parke Company:

The question is a hard one to answer off hand. We are making selling larger sizes in women's shoes. I should say that they were.

Frank Keene, of the Know Shoe Company of Milford:

Well, that's a cheesepack of a question to put before any shoeman. They say I have extensive traveling experience and, if I am to decide by what I have seen and heard in the past six months, there is very little doubt over the increased size of the female pedals. But what odds does it make. Whether small or great, business is very good.

B. J. Wagner, of C. H. Shorn & Company:

I am as positive as one can be that the increased amount of leather indicates somebody's feet are growing larger. I am particularly pleased to assign the honor to Boston.

E. B. Marshall, of the Pell Last Company:

If I were a betting man, I would stake much on this. I am willing to join the ranks of the affirmative in this question.

The shoes are being made longer in shape, and I feel that give the impression that woman's foot is becoming larger. Certainly Boston women are getting more comfortable shoes than formerly. If this proves that women's feet are getting larger because their shoes are more comfortable, why, I believe it.

Miss Denise Favereau, of the Markem Machine Company:

Women's shoes are getting larger, and this means that the foot is larger or else that women are unwilling to pinch the feet to get beauty as the ordinary shoe as made today is a thing of beauty, whether small or large.

Charles M. Lewis, of Fishel Nessler Company of New York:

Women's shoes are larger in size than formerly. That is to say more large sizes are sold. It does not make any difference to the women of today whether their feet are getting larger. Women are not worrying over their feet growing larger, in my opinion.

C. H. Wilbur, of the Brockton Heel Company:

Yes, I do. I can prove it, too. If you want to get all the beauty that women want in a shoe today, you will find out they are wearing the larger sizes. There's more downright beauty in women's shoes than ever before. If a woman sees a large size and it has beauty, she is going to have it. Boston's women's feet are getting larger. Of that I am as certain as that the sun is in the sky.

Are Boston Women's Feet Growing Larger?

No.

C. A. Dow, of the C. A. Browning Co., North Adams:

I do not believe women's feet are getting larger. Shoes are being made longer in style, and that has started someone during the Boston convention to say that Boston women's feet are expanding.

Karl Stone, of K. M. Stone Supply Co., New York:

Women's feet are not larger. I have many customers in Boston. They are wearing the same sizes, but women are demanding more ornaments today and are wearing shoes of the sandal type to set off their decollete gowns. Women want shoes to match their gowns.

J. H. Reitman, of the Albert Reitman Sons, New York City:

Women's feet are not getting larger. They seem to be larger in some shoes, but we are putting their feet in the finest of crochet shoes and we know that all this talk about the size of women's feet increasing is deceiving. Women are getting more careful about what they put upon their feet and they want the prettiest articles there as well as on the hands and around the neck. I believe that women are more particular in their foot wear than ever before.

GIRL SHOE EXPERT PREDICTS DIAMONDS ON SHOES OF FUTURE

Miss Mae Toomey, one of the busiest young women at the Shoe and Leather Market Fair in Mechanics Building, advocates more ornaments for footwear. She says the coming season of fashion will wear more diamonds on her shoes, and probably diamonds.

"You'll see many changes in footgear in the next ten years," maintains Miss Toomey. "The Egyptians used to wear many ornaments upon their feet. The time is not very far distant when diamonds will be worn on the anklets. We see anklets already coming into fashion.

"Women are paying every year more attention to foot trimming. Shoes are more than ever made to set off the beauty of the foot. People are dancing more than ever. As you look at the feet in modern dances more than you look at the whole body. Should you will find that the increased use of ornaments for the feet will come into use.

"Diamonds will be the foot ornament of the future just as they are now of the hand. Diamond anklets will in a few years be made of diamonds."

Canton Man Struck by Train May Die

Jeremiah Canniss, forty years old, of Norfolk street, Canton, while walking on the tracks of the New Haven road near the Viaduct Bridge today, was struck and knocked down by the 6.30 a. m. train from Boston. His skull was crushed and his right leg was taken off at the ankle. He was placed on an inbound train and hurried to the Massachusetts General Hospital.

UPHOLD ULSTER CONSTITUTION, LEADERS VOW

BELFAST, Ireland, July 10.—Events fraught with menace to the peace of the British Isles transpired here today.

With Sir Edward Carson, chief of the Unionist anti-home rule forces, presiding, the first meeting of the Ulster provisional government was held at Craigavon, the home of Captain James Craig.

The leaders pledged themselves to uphold the constitution of the Ulster provisional government, no matter what the consequences were. One of the chief provisions of the constitution is a solemn declaration that an Irish Parliament will never be recognized by Ulster.

It had been given out that the object of the conference was to form plans for aggressive future action on the part of the anti-home rulers in the North of Ireland.

But it was admitted by all that the Unionist policies would narrow down finally to the simple question:

"Shall it be peace or civil war?"

The arrival of Sir Edward in Belfast was made a gala occasion by his followers and the members of the Ulster volunteer forces.

HONOR GUARD FOR CARSON.

Five hundred armed members of the Ulster volunteer force formed a guard of honor which escorted the Unionist leader from the railway station to Craigavon. They were flanked by dispatch bearers on bicycles. The procession was headed by a brass band.

Fearing that disorder would result from the excitement of the occasion the authorities had the streets filled with police, but these officers were under orders to do nothing which would precipitate rioting. Sir Edward was loudly cheered as his automobile passed through the crowded streets and he acknowledged these greetings with a military salute.

FEAR OUTBREAK SUNDAY.

It is significant that Premier Asquith in his official capacity as Secretary of State for War hurriedly summoned the British general commanding the King's forces in Ulster to London for an interview. An outbreak of hostilities would not surprise the British government nor any person who has been following the course of events in Ireland.

There are grave fears that the long expected outbreak will come on Sunday, Orange day, which is the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne. Big demonstrations are being planned throughout all the north of Ireland by anti-home rulers.

Women Educators Win Victories at National Session

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 10.—Women delegates to the annual convention of the National Educational Association were jubilant today over the victories they won.

The conventories they won.

The convention not only went on record as indorsing women's suffrage, but also adopted resolutions granting equal pay for teachers regardless of sex, and five of the 18 vice presidencies were allotted to women.

Among the resolutions considered today by the general council were those providing for pensions for teachers, compulsory spelling, vacations to allow teachers to travel, international peace, physical inspection of children, co-operation between parents and teachers with regard to the teaching of sex hygiene and uniform warning of national songs.

2,000 Westinghouse Strikers Go to Work

PITTSBURG, July 10.—The first action under the new era of peace between the Westinghouse Corporation and the employes who were on strike until last night was taken today, when nearly 2,000 of the workers returned to their posts in the East Pittsburg plants. By Monday next it is believed all the strikers will be back on their jobs. The troopers probably will leave this afternoon.

'RED TAPE' IN SALEM RELIEF STARTS ROW

Former Mayor David M. Little of Salem today sounded a note of protest against the endless "red tape" which has hampered and made ineffective and even unwelcome to self-respecting men and women the relief work at Salem. He has given all his time since the fire to work in the Mayor's office, helping untangle the skeins. He said today:

"I get many complaints that persons who have lived in Salem for years, have lost all they possess and are in the utmost need, are actually suffering because of the red tape and delay.

"Many of us are so outraged at the methods used that there is some talk of an indignation meeting to bring matters to a head. The relief people are investigating everyone, even perfectly reliable old citizens of the town. There are tons of clothes at the store rooms, yet it is so hard to get them that citizens who can afford to do so are buying supplies for the needy."

Cole Wouldn't Spend Money on Banquets

"We are not spending money on banquets and talkfests, and we don't intend to do so. Another idea of our work is that if we had $1,000,000 to spend we would spend it to bring national conventions here; in other words a million dollars for a million pranks," declared John N. Cole, head of the Boston Industrial Development Board, in discussing his Boom Boston plans.

"I have proceeded rather more carefully and conservatively than is pleasing to certain interests who are more for the 'hurrah boys!' sort of thing," said Mr. Cole.

MILITIA AT SALEM COSTS STATE $50,000

It will cost the State about $50,000 for the services of the militia at the Salem fire.

The pay of the privates alone will amount to $33,600. Colonel Graves, commander of the fire guard, had two full regiments on hand most of the time. He figured on twelve companies, averaging fifty men, giving a total strength of 1,200.

These were provided by the Second Corps Cadets of Salem, the Eighth Regiment and a battalion of four companies from the Ninth Regiment, M. V. M.

The State allows each private $1.55 per day and 45 cents for rations each day, or $2 a man. They served from June 26 until July 8.

Since the militia was excused militiamen living in Salem who were burned out made a bargain with the Relief Committee to serve as special policemen for pay. Some of these complain that they have not been paid. A delegation waited on the Relief Committee today and made a protest. They demand pay and rations up to next Saturday at least.

New Haven Stock at New Low Record

New Haven opened in New York today at 61⅛, a new low price record. In Boston it sold at 61⅛, also a new low in this market. One statement regarding the present selling of this stock reads:

"The selling in New Haven was liquidation of the genuine sort. It came from New England and was doubtless impelled by the fear that the prospects of a return of the property to a dividend basis would become even more remote than they are at present if the Department of Justice persists in filing its threatened dissolution suit."

Children to Dance at Boston Benefit for Salem Relief Fund

A novel benefit and dance, the proceeds to go to the Salem fire relief fund, has been arranged to take place next Wednesday at the Boston Arena on St. Botolph street. There will be an exhibition of dancing by children under the direction of Mrs. Lilla Viles Wyman and Mrs. W. S. Butler, two of the oldest dancing teachers in Boston.

William and Pauline Chamberlain of Brookline will give an exhibition. Clayton Robinson and Miss Donna George will feature their famous "Scarecrow Dance." At a quarter past nine the floor will be opened for public dancing.

15 SAVED AS FRUITER SINKS PILOTS' BOAT

NEW YORK, July 10.—Fifteen men were rescued in a spectacular fashion today when the steam pilot boat New Jersey was run down and sunk in Ambrose Channel by the United Fruit Company steamer Manchioneal during a thick fog. All of the crew and the pilots on board the New Jersey were picked up from the water without injury.

The Manchioneal was creeping down the channel when she suddenly crashed into the little pilot boat, cutting a deep gash below the waterline.

Both the New Jersey and the Manchioneal flashed "S O S" signals, which were picked up by the Southern Pacific steamer El Sud, which was nearby. Boats were lowered by the fruit steamer, the Southern Pacific liner and a United States dredging boat at work near the scene of the collision.

AMESBURY MAN IS FOUND DEAD WITH HEAD CUT

AMESBURY, July 10.—William H. Locke, fifty, of No. 43 Market street, a well-known paint and oil merchant, was found dead today in a gutter on Market street, near Clark street, within a hundred yards of his home. There was a cut on his head.

Medical Examiner Murphy viewed the body, but withheld his opinion as to the cause of death. He got in touch at once with District Attorney Atwill of Lynn.

Locke was a member of the Amesbury Club and the Newburyport Lodge of Elks. He spent yesterday evening at the latter's clubhouse and arrived home at 12:50. At that hour he had lunch in a local restaurant. That was the last seen of him until his body was found at 4:45 a. m.

AMERICAN BOXERS HOT ON TRAIL OF FREDDY WELSH FOR CHANCE TO WIN TITLE

LEAGUE BATTLE HOT, BUT RED SOX FALL DOWN

By NICK FLATLEY.

The little old American League race is more knotted up than ever. The leading sextet is now within the six-game limit, half a battle closer than the teams were Wednesday. Today is the same hectic hunk. The six teams this afternoon wind up their own particular little intercecine struggle.

Some rather surprising things happened in the greatest race ever yesterday. First, and by far, most important, the league leading Athletics sustained a double bump at the hands of the Detroit Tigers. Said Tigers, thereby, propped themselves into second place.

The White Sox, though winners, were forced to step down a rung and now hold forth in third. The Red Sox, of course, lost, but that's getting to be more or less expected by Boston "fans."

If you don't think so, just take a peek at some attendance figures. Tuesday when the Sox, after a struggle on the road came home, they drew 18,556 fans. True, they played a double-header, but under normal conditions, a 10,000 crowd would have been large, very large.

ATTENDANCE FALLING OFF.

Yesterday, after the disaster of the day before, just 4,833 faithful souls wended through the turnstiles. Two years ago, after the Red Sox had showed they were in the race to the finish, that they had a little fight in their systems, double that number was on hand every day.

Had the Carrigans even split even Tuesday, it's safe to say the same would have held good. But even the stoutest-hearted fan loses confidence after he sits and watches a couple of perfectly good games kicked into the discard.

There's still some hope left. The team is nearer the front than it was before yesterday's defeat. But this hope will soon be quenched unless satisfactory results begin to be put on the records out at Fenway.

PENNANT HOPES SHATTERED.

The team has been going like a spavined horse ever since the first glimmerings of pennant hope began to stir up the Boston fans. Coming into Washington on their way home after a great trip out the road, the team should have come into the realization that a pennant, with all that goes with it in the way of money, was waiting right around the corner.

Doubtless the players saw this. It should have started something. It did, with the reverse. English and to say. The same situation made the mediocre Chicago White Sox almost unbeatable. But it worked just the opposite way with the Red Sox.

They have dropped six of their last eight games, three to Washington, and latterly three in a row to the White Sox. Mathematical playing alone can account for at least four of these setbacks.

It might be going too far to say that the team is not game. This impression, nevertheless, is generally prevalent throughout Boston.

Before running into this hornet's nest, the Sox had collected 19 out of 18. Had they kept up this pace they would now be in the front or so close to it that the gap wouldn't make much difference.

The Red Sox team, one of the highest salaried outfits in all baseball, if not actually the highest, certainly has players capable of doing better than has been the case in the last few days.

Luck, of course, plays a great big part in baseball. That's an axiom. But another axiom, and equally true, is that the team that goes out and forces fortune brings home the bacon.

But to get back to the league race in general. As we have said, the first six are within six.

Here are the figures:

| | W. | L. | Behind Leader. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Athletics | 44 | 31 | |
| Detroit | 44 | 35 | 2 games |
| Chicago | 41 | 33 | 2½ games |
| Washington | 41 | 34 | 3 games |
| St. Louis | 41 | 36 | 4 games |
| Boston | 38 | 38 | 6 games |

From the above it is evident that the kaleidoscopic shifting that has marked the A. L. parade lately is likely to hold good for some time to come.

STILL CHANCE FOR RED SOX.

And the Red Sox could, and would if they only shook themselves up a bit, pull the Phoenix stuff and rise glorious from the ashes. If they don't they are liable to get down and be engaged with the Naps and the Yanks for the anchor place.

The new owner of the team is willing to spend money. He showed this by giving up $25,000 for three Baltimore recruits yesterday.

It's a safe bet that if things don't change shortly, there will be some trading of regulars pulled off. A little new blood might work wonders and couldn't do a whole lot of harm.

SOUTH BOSTON MEETS EVERETT IN BIKE RACES

Fresh from his record-breaking string of victories over the leading pace followers of the country, Bobby Walthour, the veteran biker, is due at the Revere Beach oval today where he will finish training for his 50-mile race against Clarence Carman, Jimmy Moran and Worth Mitten tomorrow evening.

Walthour has defeated Leon Didier, the French champion, at both the short and long distance and is being hailed as the leader of his class. He has already crushed three Jew records behind the motor this season—the one-hour, thirty-mile and ten-mile.

Carman is traveling at his early Spring pace and is a close second to Walthour in the number of points for wins this season.

Mitten developed into quite a pace follower during his trip abroad and incidentally cleaned up the best riders in Germany and France. The Iowa boy made a fine showing in his only start since his return to this country.

In addition to the motor-paced race and regular list of amateur and professional events on Saturday night, there will be a tandem race between teams composed of Patsy Logan of South Boston and Hugh McFarland of Boston and Connolly and Rollins, both of Everett, and a special match race between Jack Barber and Silvio Pecci.

If the present popularity of tandem racing continues it will probably be listed among the regular events at the Beach oval.

Quincy Y. C. Sail.

The Quincy Yacht Club will hold its annual club sail and picnic next Sunday. The run will be from the anchorage off the clubhouse at Houghs Neck to Bass Point. All yachts from neighboring clubs that wish to participate are invited.

MITCHELL'S SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

THE remark was made in this column yesterday that many persons would cheer rifle double header on Wednesday wondered why Joe Wood did not pitch the second game instead of Coumbe, a rookie.

The answer is that "Smoky Joe" has a sore arm and is not able to work.

"My arm is sore, but I am in fine shape otherwise," observed the latter today.

An ocean greyhound might as well say: "My propeller shaft is broken, but otherwise I'm as staunch as they make 'em."

* * *

FROM a club that a few days ago was reckoned to have the best balanced pitching staff in the big leagues, the Red Sox now suddenly find themselves with only two regulars in condition to work. And these two are left-handers. Wood's arm is sore, Foster hasn't recovered from an injury to his knee, Bedient hasn't been able to deliver the goods and there is nobody left but rookies—except the southpaws.

Ruth, the high-priced Baltimore pitcher, and Shore, another teammate, who have just been bought by the Red Sox, will be here on Saturday and Carrigan may find it necessary to use one of them.

* * *

"THE three men I bought from the Baltimore Club—Pitchers Ruth and Shores and Catcher Agnew—cost me more than $22,000," said President Lannin today, "but I will stop at nothing to get the best possible results for my team. I offered Jack Dunn, owner of the Baltimore team, $25,000 for Ruth, Shores and Derrick the other day, but the offer was refused. A day later Dunn sold Derrick, but I have succeeded in getting the two pitchers I wanted and also a fine catcher. The idea in getting Egan is that he is used to catching these pitchers and I expect Carrigan will use him when he works Ruth or Shores."

* * *

IF the Red Sox could only swap Chicago games with the Braves they would be mighty close to the Athletics.

The Red Sox-White Sox record for the season is in:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| White Sox | won 8 | lost 3 |
| Red Sox | won 3 | lost 8 |

On the other hand the battles between the Braves and Cubs show this result:

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| Braves | won 8 | lost 3 |
| Cubs | won 2 | lost 8 |

* * *

LARRY GARDNER'S hard luck with the bat continues. In yesterday's game he drove a terrific grounder toward right field, but Pernoll was directly in its path. He managed to knock the ball down and it rolled toward first base. The White-Leg was able to get it and touch the bag just in time.

Next time up Gardner smashed a hard liner to right, but Collins got to it after a short run.

Larry struck out when he next faced Cicotte, but the last time up he nearly broke the Chicago pitcher's hand with a drive. The ball glanced off Cicotte's hand and before Blackburn could get it to first Gardner had passed the bag.

* * *

THE White Sox are pretty lucky to get away with the three games. "That writer is crazy," Callahan will say when he reads this.

A gentleman connected with the Red Sox is willing to bet $100 that the Red Sox will beat out the White Sox in the race and also that the Chicago team will finish in the second division.

If Callahan at als. care to take the risk the writer will tell them where they can place their money.

* * *

FRANK CHANCE has come to the conclusion that the Athletics will win the American League pennant. The New York manager does not see where the Mackmen are so weak in pitching—and weakness in the pitching staff is what a lot of baseball men are saying is the matter with Connie Mack's team.

The other day some one made the statement to Mack that he was weak in pitching. Connie at once became interested and was anxious to know whether Shawkey Bush, Bender and Plank had been forgotten. These men, according to the tall manager, are pitching as well as they did last year and will be able to stand off the other American League teams when the pinch comes.

* * *

ON top of this the Athletics are hitting the ball with more success than their rivals, and also have not lost their knack of scoring runs.

* * *

JACK COOMBS' physician has notified the great hoxman that he can resume regular work without fear of suffering a relapse and Coombs, it is declared, will soon begin taking his turn with the other pitchers on Mack's staff.

Mack isn't making predictions, but he appears to be bristling with his usual confidence.

* * *

NONE knows, except those on the very inside, how much money the National Commission has in the world war fund, but it is estimated that fully $250,000 is at the commission's disposal to fight the fight of Organized Baseball against the Federal League.

It is said that 5 per cent. of the major league clubs' receipts have been turned over to the National Commission. The commission already had about $100,000 on hand so that the estimate of $350,000 does not seem out of the way.

* * *

"SILK" O'LOUGHLIN, the noted umpire, is in Boston on his first visit of the year. He is working with Tommy Connolly, who opened the season at Fenway Park.

These two make a great pair of umpires. Both are quick in their movements and quick in their decisions, and both know how to handle a game of ball to perfection. Players realize they cannot take liberties with either of them and as a result the games in which they officiate are apt to run smoothly.

* * *

"I never tried to keep count of the number of ball games I have been accused of losing," Silk said. "I could, however, tell the dates of every game I really believe I lost by a poor decision.

"My skin is thick enough to shed the roasts that are heaped upon me. I do not quit speaking to a newspaper man who gives me a turning over. Neither do I get sore at a player, who, in the heat of battle blames me for the loss of a game.

"I don't engage in being called everything but a murderer, but I do not dispute any one's rights to do so or carry a grudge against those who think they have that right."

Sport Carnival of Irish-American A.C.

The Irish-American A. C. has started the ball rolling for its first annual athletic carnival, to be held at the Locust Street grounds Saturday, July 25. Entry blanks have been sent to all the local athletic clubs and all have expressed an intention of entering their full teams in the different athletic events.

Johnny Magee, chairman of the athletic committee, has succeeded in signing up one of the much sought for Gaelic football matches in the meeting of the County Connaught team against the Munster.

Brockton Colonials Ready for North Ends

President Dan Smith of the Brockton Colonial League club announced today that his team was ready to meet the North Ends, champions of the city, on the first open date in the league schedule, which happens to be August 3. Manager Harry Fenerty of the North Ends published a statement recently in which he said he was ready to match his team against the Colonial League outfit for fun, money or charity.

SMITH ENDS TRAINING FOR CARPENTIER GO

LONDON, July 10.—Gunboat Smith has prospered so well in his training at Harrow for his match with Georges Carpentier at Olympia next Thursday that he put in his last really hard work yesterday, and at the conclusion of a heavy day he decided to ease up on his preparation.

It is interesting to note that despite his arduous labors in training Smith has gained a little weight and will enter the ring against Carpentier practically at 188 pounds. This will give him a few pounds the advantage over the French champion.

RED SOX HOPE TO GET BETTER RESULT TODAY

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

With the Red Sox shot to pieces as a result of accidents, the Chicago White Sox are having a picnic just now. All the games have been close, however, and with the full strength of the team in the lineup our boys might have won all three of them.

Letting bygones be bygones, as one has to do in baseball, it may be remarked that there will be another game between the same teams up at Fenway nastiness this afternoon.

Uncle Bill Carrigan, the Red Sox manager, will be hard put to select a pitcher for box duty. His staff is in bad shape at present. Joe Wood has a sore arm, Leonard and Coombs worked Wednesday and Collins pitched yesterday. There are left Dedeen, who hasn't performed well this season, and Rankin Johnson, about whose condition there is some question. Also there be Cooper, the rookie.

The White Sox have some very dependable men left. There is Scott, for example, and the rescue pitcher, Faber. And Big Ed Walsh is available in a pinch. The visitors are well fixed for box material.

The Boston team has made a disappointing start on its home grounds but the season isn't more than half over and they are only a few games behind the leaders. No use giving up hope for better things.

BASEBALL NEWS AND NOTES

JUST WHEN IT APPEARED AS THOUGH Marty O'Toole was doing a real comeback the Phillies came along and forced him to seek cover after two innings. Tuesday Marty had pitched two full games, in which he was nicked for just seven safeties. That is his best streak of pitching since he joined the Pirates.

* * *

LEQUE, UNTIL RECENTLY A MEMBER of the Braves' pitching staff, is not only nosing in the second New Jersey City for first, but the second leg occasionally as well. The Cuban is a good fielder, as some of his recent work proves.

* * *

JANVRIN IS FILLING IN MOST ACCEPTABLE at first base for the Red Sox, and, until he shows a tendency to fall off in his work it is not likely that he will be replaced.

* * *

"SHONO" COLLINS, THE NEWTON BOY, is a pretty prominent figure in the recent success of the White Sox, although batting the ball hard and often there days.

* * *

HARRY HOOPER WILL BE BACK IN THE Red Sox lineup in the course of a few days.

* * *

KIRBY OF MOBILE, AT ONE TIME A member of the Giants, is tied with Kinsey of Birmingham, once a Cub, for the batting leadership of the Southern League. Each has batted at a .361 clip.

* * *

MARSAN'S FEDERAL LEAGUE CONTRACT called for $6,000 a year for three years, according to Business Manager Frank Bancroft of the Reds. The sum of $9,000 of the full amount, has already been paid to the Cuban, who gave his release to Manager Hitchcock.

* * *

ENOS KIRKPATRICK, WHO HAS BEEN out of the game all season with an injured ankle, is now traveling with the Baltimore Federals. He is doing coaching stunts at third base.

* * *

MATHEWSON'S VICTORY OVER THE Phillies in the recent series at the Polo Grounds is the first he has scored since the Quakers since he became a Giant. The Phillies have won only twenty-one games from the New York veteran.

* * *

PITCHERS IN THE AMERICAN ASSOCIAtion seem to suit John Titus. The former Boston outfielder has a record of .838 for twenty-five games.

* * *

BABE MYERS, VETERAN MINOR LEAGUE manager, has taken a position with the Cleveland club as a scout.

* * *

ANY PITCHER WHO CAN HOLD THE Athletics to one hit is entitled to a seat with the mighty. That is what Bob Shawkey did Wednesday. The lone hit was made in the ninth inning and was not a clean one by any means. One-hit pitching seems to be a habit of Callahan's pitchers.

BRAVES AFTER THREE IN ROW FROM THE CUBS

CHICAGO, July 10.—Three straight was the cry of the Braves today, as they prepared to take the field against the Cubs.

They had the chance to make good their wish, too, for they won their second straight yesterday when they licked the Cubs, 2 to 1.

It's likely that Otto Hess will be sent to the slab in this third game. With the exception of George Tyler, he is the most feared twirler on the Boston staff.

That may cause a grin in Boston, but it don't in Chicago, for despite the fact that Hess is no longer a youngster, he is mighty effective against the West Side crew.

WINDY CITY WAILS.

The Chicago fans will be happy when the Boston crew gets out of town.

Then the Cubs would rather battle the leading Giants than the trailing Braves any day.

Just below this season have the Cubs felt the pleasure which comes from victory, when they had the Braves for opponents. And they have played ten games.

When the Boston lads came here the Chicago fans were quite certain that the pennant would fly from the West Side staff. They are not quite so certain of it now.

And Johnny Evers is chortling.

Boston Fans Anxious to Give $25,000 Trio for Red Sox the O. O.

Boston fans are anxiously awaiting the arrival of the $25,000 trio purchased from the Baltimore International League by President Lannin of the Red Sox.

These players are Pitchers Ruth and Shore, the former a southpaw, and Catcher Ben Egan, who was formerly with the Athletics.

While the Sox were in Washington President Lannin offered Jack Dunn $25,000 for this trio, but it was not accepted. It is believed that the Boston club has been forced to pay over a sum in excess of this.

Cup Yacht Trials Twice Postponed; on Again Today

NEWPORT, R. I, July 10.—For the second time in as many days poor weather caused a postponement yesterday of the races of the America Cup yachts, but the rival skippers on the Resolute, Vanitie and Defiance are hoping for better luck today.

"It's regrettable that we have to postpone any of the cup trial races," said W. Butler Duncan, chairman of the America Cup committee.

"Every postponement means a day lost, for there are only a stated number of racing days and we want all the opportunity we can have to observe the yachts before we make the selection of a cup defender.

"While we had planned to race the yachts in pairs, we have decided to race all three sloops together until there is some reason for making a change."

ALL-STAR CARD AT CAMBRIDGE CLUB TONIGHT

There will be three ten-round bouts at the University A. C. in Cambridge tonight. The complete card is as follows: "Young" Lustig vs. Terry Brooks, "Tiger" Young vs. Tommy McFarland and Tommy Shea vs. Tommy Flannagan.

Brooks and Lustig will clash in the feature event of the evening, and they are expected to put up a hard, fast battle. Brooks is one of the hardest hitting lightweights in these parts, and he informs us that he will try and stop friend Lustig inside of the limit.

Lustig, however, is one of the classiest of the New York 135-pounders, and he has been winning with regularity of late he will probably make things interesting for Terry.

The bout between Young and McFarland should be an interesting affair. Young is well known to local fans and may be relied upon to give a good account of himself. McFarland is under the management of Jack Reno, the former amateur heavyweight champion, and the big fellow says that his protege will prove too fast for Young.

Tommy Flannagan of Cambridge and Tommy Shea each has balls from New Haven, where they had a good exhibition in the inter-town encounter. Shea has the record and expects to win from the Cambridge boy.

Short Sports of All Sorts

THE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP OF NEW Richmond and Hudson, two little towns up in the woods of the northern part of Wisconsin, has been settled and the natives of New Richmond are rejoicing for their favorite won the match. The players came from far away Wisconsin to the Harvard medical courts to decide the championship. W. W. Mosher, Jr., was the New Richmond player and was pitted against Wilder Penfield of Hudson. So much interest was taken in the match in the home towns of the players and the results of each set were telegraphed West.

Their Married Life

In Trying to Pick an Ideal Vacation Resort Warren's Selfishness Again Asserts Itself.

"HERE are some books I brought home from the office, and three or four of yesterday's papers: we ought to find something to suit us," and Warren flung some magazines on the table.

"Dear, how thoughtful of you to bring them home. Oh, there are some splendid places in this one; listen to this:

"'Idle Villa, in the heart of the Catskills. Accommodates one Hundred guests; bathing in Whip-poor-will Lake, tramping, trout fishing, boating free to guests; references required.'

"I wonder why they want references," said Helen wrinkled up her forehead; "that seems so unnecessary for a summer hotel."

"We'll pass that place up; sounds too good to be true, anyway. How about dinner, we can do this just as well afterward, and I'm about starved?"

"All right, I'll go out and see if Nora has everything ready. We're going to have spaghetti tonight fixed the way you like it, and this is the first time that Nora has ever cooked it that way."

"Thought maybe you might have baked tomatoes," grumbled Warren, following Helen out into the dining-room. Helen always hated to have Warren come out before Nora was ready. Nora was capable, but it flustered her to have to hurry, and Helen had planned the dinner with several dishes that Warren particularly cared for; it was disappointing to have him speak of something else.

"We'll have the tomatoes tomorrow, dear; it's Nora's day out, but I know just how to fix them. Everything is ready now, and I'm sure the spaghetti will be good."

Nora placed the soup on the table, and Helen and Warren sat down.

"Why not have salads and cold things, now that the weather is getting so warm?" said Warren, as he scalded his tongue with the hot soup.

"Why, dear, I'd be only too glad to have a light meal in the evening; you have always insisted on having a regular dinner, so I hadn't thought about changing."

Warren was silent, and Helen's thoughts went back to the vacation books. She was not hungry, as she had had tea down town earlier in the afternoon and the cooked food did not appeal to her.

"What's the matter, you're not eating anything? Suppose you've been filling up this afternoon."

"I had a cup of tea downtown, dear, it was so hot this noon, that I didn't eat much lunch."

BACK TO VACATION

"Well, said Warren, finally, after the ice cream had somewhat cooled him off, "suppose we have a look at the books now. I don't know when I'll get my vacation, but we might as well be prepared."

"Do you think this sounds too expensive?" said Helen, timidly:

Grey Swan Inn on Mount Stormville, overlooking the mountain valley for miles, one thousand feet above sea level, accomodates 200, terms $15 to $20

"I'll wager you'd have to dress some at a place like that. I want a place to eat and rest, nothing like that for me."

Hurried over the pages of the magazine slowly. She had planned on going somewhere where she could at least be presentable. Her clothes were not suitable for going anywhere and roughing it, in fact Warren had said earlier in the year that he was tired of camp life.

"Now, here's something like," said Warren, interrupting her thoughts:

Camp life on the Stony Point River. Twenty miles from civilization, canoeing, fishing, accommodates twenty-five; good, wholesome food, fishing splendid; write for terms.

"How about that? No dressing for dinner every night at a place like that, nothing to do but enjoy life."

"But, dear, I hadn't planned going out in the woods somewhere and roughing it. Don't you remember two years ago when you said you'd never try it again, so many mosquitoes and gnats and the cooking was all done over camp fires."

"That was different; a place in the woods is just the place for you to get rested up in, not some of those new fangled hotels."

Helen was silent, and Warren turned back to his book with a scowl.

"Would you like to try the seashore? We haven't been there in so long it might be nice for a change," ventured Helen, hoping to change the subject.

"It might do if we could find a place that isn't on the map. None of these fashionable places on the Jersey coast for me."

Helen had been reading of just such a place. She loved the endless rush of the seashore, the glare of the sun on the sands, the hundreds of bathers and the lure of a large hotel with its crowds of people. She hated to bury herself in some little fishing village, where all her pretty dresses would have to be discarded for a middy blouse.

"Where would you like to go?" she asked. Warren was smiling; she knew that he had found something to his liking.

"Fisherman's cottage for rent on the Sound. Sail boat in good condition rented for season to right party; ten minutes from post office; private bathing beach; three hours from city.'

"Some place, eh? Perhaps that would suit you better than roughing it in the woods."

HELEN PROTESTS

"But, don't you see, dear, that at either place I wouldn't have a thing suitable to wear? I bought all my clothes thinking that we would go to a hotel this Summer, and if we went down to a cottage like that, Nora would have to go along, or else I would have to do my own work."

"How about taking our meals out? There wouldn't be anything for you to do then."

"Are you sure you want to go to a place like that, Warren? There may not be a place near enough where we could get our meals."

"Well, we could go down and see, couldn't we? I might have known that any place I picked out you would never be satisfied with."

"But, dear, you know I don't feel that way. I want you to be pleased; it doesn't matter about me."

"That's right, put on that injured martyr air. Well, how would you like to take a Summer bungalow in some fashionable place where you could dress and I could do as I pleased?"

"You mean keep house all Summer?"

"Sure; any more objections?"

"Only that I promised Nora that she could have a vacation when we left. She wants to go off with Mrs. Stevens' maid Lizzie, and I told her quite a while ago that it would be all right."

"That's right, let your maid run you; she'll be telling us when to go next."

"Now, dear, you know Nora is as good as gold."

"How about breaking in another maid for just the time we are gone?"

"Oh, but Warren, you know how hard it would be to get a good, reliable girl, and to take one away to a strange place—why, I wouldn't have a minute's peace."

"Looks as if we don't take a cottage. Suppose we'll end up by staying right here in town."

"How about this? Oh, Warren this really sounds fine."

FIREMAN'S BUNGALOWS

Offer all the attractions of a fashionable hotel with the privileges of dressing as you please. In the Adirondack Mountains, excellent table, all modern improvements; tennis, golf and a huge dancing pavilion; thirty-five bungalows built along the Shooting Rapids River, fishing, boating and bathing of the highest order. Terms $25, two in a bungalow."

It certainly did sound almost perfect. Even Warren seemed attracted by the offer, although he refused to appear at all impressed.

"That's all right, if they give all they offer," skeptically. "Take it not there are lots of other things to offset all they advertise."

"Well, we can write, dear, and get any information we need. Don't you think it sounds attractive?"

"Better wait till you write and find out before you plan things. You women are right for mapping up as soon as you hear about a place that sounds halfway decent."

"This sounds better than that, Warren. I really do believe it's a find. Will you write tomorrow, I can hardly wait to hear."

"I will if I have time. What did you do with my bathing suit?"

"It's packed away with mine. I'll see about it tomorrow. I think mine will do with a little furbishing up. I can get one of those black taffeta things to wear with it, and it will look like new."

"That's right, plan your wardrobe before we even write to the place. And picking up the newspaper Warren dismissed the thought from his mind.

Household Suggestions

When making soups or stews, if there is too much flavor of one particular ingredient, a small piece of parsley added will equalize the flavoring.

After washing lamp chimneys try polishing them with dry salt. This gives the glass a brilliant shine and prevents it from cracking.

Raw potato juice is a valuable cleanser. It will moisten stains from the hands and also from woolen fabrics.

Vinegar placed in a bottle of dried-up glue will moisten and make it liquid again.

Some people place a small bag of unslaked lime inside the piano to keep the damp away. This prevents the strings from rusting and keeps the piano in good condition.

If a teaspoonful of vinegar is put in the saucepan just before straining the potatoes, this will take all blackness out and make them white and floury.

To restore a voice rendered hoarse by much speaking, eat a piece of anchovy. If there is no cold or fatigue the effect is almost instantaneous.

To clean glass toilet bottles, put a little vinegar and salt into the bottle, allow to remain for 24 hours and then rinse out in clear warm water.

To prevent the skin from discoloring after a fall or blow, take a little dry starch, moisten it with cold water, and lay on the injured part.

It is a good plan to pepper a carpet thickly just where any heavy piece of furniture has to rest on it, as this helps to keep moths, etc., away.

Cook cauliflowers in milk and water; it gives them a better flavor, and they look whiter than when cooked in water.

When making blue-water for clothes, add a little salt to it. This distributes the color evenly and prevents "patches."

To purify a cistern tie charcoal in a bag and drop it in.

Honey and glycerine, mixed in equal proportions, is an excellent remedy for cracked lips. It should be applied every night till the cracks are thoroughly healed.

What Dame Fashion Is Offering

BY OLIVETTE

VOILE is justly popular for Summer frocks, for it is cool looking and falls in the most charming of lines. For the model we show you on the left, white voile embroidered in amaranthe flowers is used.

The bodice crosses in a group of gatherings at the shoulder and is V-shaped front and back under a plaiting of white linen. The sleeve is of plain material, finished by a hemstitched band and a row of amaranthe buttons.

There is a long tunic of the embroidered material and an underskirt of the plain with a finishing band of the embroidery hemstitched on as a finish.

The Summer woman has invaded the masculine wardrobe—she has adopted pantalet-like skirts, and even in extreme cases—pantalets, waistcoats, Gladstone collars and braid-bound coats; she makes her own as well as "bowler" and sailor hats, and spats. Now she has adapted the "soutane" of the clergy.

This quaint afternoon frock on the right is made of violet taffeta. The fitted bodice, gathered crosswise in front in basque fashion is opened with scalloped edges over a small gathered yoke of net which forms a shell collar caught with a narrow taffeta tie.

The tunic is stitched at the height of the hips and opens over the plain, round underskirt by buttons down front as at the bodice with closely set buttons of the material. The plain underskirt is slit at the foot.

The cape that completes this frock is of the same material, short at the front and graduating down to great length at the back. It has a square collar at the back and has straps in front that are shirred into ruching shape. Orchid satin lines it.

OLIVETTE.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I HAD one of them story tellers in here this morning to have his nails did," said the Manicure Lady. "I don't mind hearing a story told on the stage once in a while, but if there is anything that gets my goat it is for some boy comic to come in here and reel off seven of eight stories in a row. None of them is funny anyhow, and most of them is regular old Joseph Miller's that I heard when I was a slip of a girl.

"This young gent seemed to think that it was his special mission in this world to make me laugh. I didn't give him a tumble at all. I never laughed a bit at none of his yarns, but he was one of them persevering kind of gents that never gives on the ebb, and he kept trying another brand of humor. At last he did tell one pretty good one about an old Irishman that said to his pal, 'I would give a thousand dollars to find out the place where I am going to die.' What good would that do you?' his friend asked him. 'Because if I knew the place where I was going to die,' says the Irishman, 'I would never go near it.' I laughed a little at that one, and he seemed so pleased that he told me three more.'

"I never cared much to listen to them stories," said the Head Barber. "Once in a while you run across some fellow that knows how to tell a story and make it short and snappy, but even then there is always a crowd gets around, and some poet in the crowd is sure to start one about a hundred yards long, and with no point at the end. I used to tell stories at parties when I was a kid, but I got cured one time when I went to a kind of banquet and tried to spring some there. It was brutal, the freeze I got. Everybody was looking out of the window when I got through, and I have never told a story since."

"I tried got the same deal," said the Manicure Lady. "He got a invitation to some banquet that was gave by the order for civic purity or some such bunch, and the poor boob opened a few jokes out of a almanac so in case they called on him he would be there with something to spring on them. He also wrote a poem to close with, and sure enough they called on him. I think the toastmaster must have been a enemy of his. Wilfred got up and sprung his jokes and never got a laugh, and then he recites the poem. I always remembered that poem, because it nearly broke poor brother's heart to have it go so poor in front of a crowd. This is what he recited:

'Of some things I am not sure,
But one thing is a surety,
No States or nation can be pure
Without this civic purity.

'We all have made some grave mistake,
The reckless and the prayerful,
But civic purity will make
Us all behave more careful.

"The crowd never gave him no hand when he got up to speak or when he set down, and I felt sorry for him, but it taught him a lesson, and he ain't never tried to entertain since."

Reason Obvious

Mrs. Robinson rushed from her bedroom in a state of great indignation, and, leaning over the balustrade at the top of the staircase, shouted angrily:

"Bridget—Bridget, come here this minute!"

Bridget came.

"I thought you said you'd cleaned this room," continued Mrs. Robinson, still shouting angrily. "But just look under the bed; the floor is simply thick with dust. Haven't I told you that you must always sweep under the beds?"

"Well, mum," replied Bridget, in tearful indignation, "and how I should like to know, could the dust have got under the bed if I hadn't swept it there?"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

LET IT END

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a girl about two months ago and have thought the world of her. I am nineteen years of age and get $8.50 a week, with a very good future before me. Do you think I love her after only knowing her so short a time? She is twenty-one. My folks discourage me. YOUTHFUL.

YOU can't keep yourself on $8.50 a week. You are too young to love seriously. You have not known her long enough. Your folks are right. Go to work to make a man of yourself and forget her.

F. P.

UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES, NO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen, and deeply in love with a gentleman two years my senior. He has proposed to me, but I have not accepted him yet, because he will not be able to furnish a home like the one I have been accustomed to, so he has to work for a living. I wish you would tell me whether or not you think I ought to accept his offer of marriage. MISS EARL.

YOUR question proves that you are not fitted to be his wife. He should marry a girl who is sensible enough to care all the more for a man who works for a living, and I fear you are not that. You do not love him, or the question of the furniture would not enter your head.

YOU WERE VERY SILLY

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I met a young man two years ago, and we instantly took a great liking for each other. He asked me if he could wear my ring, and I said yes, but to-day I gave it back because it belonged to a boy friend. It is three weeks since then, and I have not heard from him and can't get the ring back. BOTHERED.

THE girl who lets every stray acquaintance, or even a friend, borrow her jewelry is always punished, and deserves to be. You must buy your friend another ring, and always remember the lesson.

SOMETHING SENSIBLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A girl friend of mine has her first year wedding anniversary. What would be a proper gift?

F. P.

WITH marriage comes appreciation of the useful, and I am sure anything from a pretty towel to a china plate or cut glass dish would be acceptable.

You know her wants and her likings and the limitations of your own purse, and should find the buying of a gift an easy matter.

One of the Most Sensational Stories Ever Written

The Yellow Ticket

Russia's Persecution of the Jews Fully Exposed

Adapted from the play presented by A. H. Woods at the Eltinge Theatre, New York City, and written by Michael Morton.

(Novelized)

By A. A. WATERBURY

There were challenge and daring indifference of feelings in that insolent bit of bravado, and Rolfe felt that when he uttered his wrathful conviction he was fairly throwing down the gage of warfare before the friends of the dead man whom he had so unequivocally designated as a cur.

Zoubatoff sounded a note of warning that but dimly suggested the fate he was holding in reserve for this impudent young American.

"You are dreaming, Mr. Rolfe—a romantic dream. You may wake and find it is not a romance, but a net you are entangled in."

"But the girl—she has no friends or counsel nor relative. I stand in their place as her—friend."

Some of his tender feeling for Anna crept into that simple statement, but Zoubatoff met it with a still more sneering threat—and now he was beginning to come out into the open as an avowed enemy.

"All those who enter here leave friends behind."

Rolfe seemed quite undisturbed by this declaration of war.

"Then I cannot see her until after the trial?"

"There will be no trial."

Rolfe looked at Zubatoff with what seemed like fright and dismay. He answered with saddened recognition of the hopelessness of expecting a fair deal from Russia—to the Jews.

THE SEARCH

"Oh, I understand. You are going to put her away quietly. She will simply drop out of sight, with no one to ask the reason why—except myself. Is that it? Well, Monsieur Zoubatoff, we will see."

Two soldiers had come in silently and were standing at attention near Aylas. There was an air of tense waiting for orders among the Russians.

"One moment, Mr. Rolfe," said Zoubatoff. "If you will let us see the letter we will let you see the girl."

Rolfe measured his opportunity slowly.

"You don't suppose I brought that letter in here with me, do you? I'd risk myself, but not that letter."

"Search him!" commanded the chief. In spite of his declaration that he had not the letter, Rolfe struggled manfully against the odds of three to one. Perhaps he felt that it was beneath the dignity of an American journalist to be "searched" by the servants of the Okrana.

"Well, what are you going to do with that?" asked the American as Pavlas drew from his pocket the "document of evidence."

"We do not answer questions here," replied Zoubatoff grimly.

"Well, I will not ask questions. I will state facts," said Rolfe with staccato emphasis that suggested he was beginning to feel a bit nervous at the thought, of how thoroughly he was in the power of the Okrana. "You are trying to make a good impression on the world just now. At Russia's special invitation the next international congress for the suppression of the white slave traffic is to be held in St. Petersburg. Well, I am going to spoil that good impression. I am going to show up your system of Yellow Tickets as applied to young girls. I shall tell unsparingly of your degradation of womanhood and the bestiality of it. This system is kept up and fostered by your Government with police agents in towns and villages pushing the business for the Yellow Ticket. That's the message Anna Mirrel is going to send out to the world through me—though you do put her away for killing a brute in self-defence."

All his easy manner of Broadway bravado and banter had fallen from Rolfe and he spoke with the grim earnestness of real manhood. Personal danger and finesse in the midst of diplomatic danger seemed forgotten and thoughts of actual violence did not enter his mind. It was in the mental vision of Mr. Rolfe.

But now Zoubatoff was ready to state his intentions. They had crystallized into actuality as Rolfe spoke his scornful denunciation of the methods of Russia. He would show no mercy to this rash young American.

THE CONSEQUENCES

"You have seen fit to force yourself into this case, Mr. Rolfe. You must take the consequences.

"The escort for the prisoner, Your Excellency," announced Pavlac.

"You are under arrest, Mr. Rolfe," said Zoubatoff curtly.

"On what charge?" demanded the American, rising.

"This confession of Anna Mirrel's makes you an accessory after the fact."

Rolfe laughed scornfully. "Oh, I'm not a poor dentist of a Russian Jew you can throw into prison for a song as you like on a trumped-up charge, without a trial."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Up-to-the-Minute Jokes

An Irishman and a Scot were arguing as to the merits of their respective countries.

"Ah, weel," said Sandy, "they tour dogs an auld castle in Scotland and found enamel wires under it, which shows that the telegraph was known there hoondreds o' years ago."

"Well, begob Pat, "they toor down an auld castle in Oireland, and, begorra, there was no wires found under it, which shows that they knew all about wireless telegraphy in Oireland hundreds av years ago."

The firm, desiring to be up to date, had put a suggestion box in the offices. All the employees who had an idea for the improvement of the firm's business methods were invited to deposit their ideas in this box. If they were approved the firm would pay for them.

When it was first opened the box contained a slip of paper. It was unsigned, but when the heads of the firm read "That those who work most earn the biggest salaries," they recognized a cry from the office boy's heart.

* * *

"Razor comfortable?"

No reply.

"Have you pretty close?"

No reply.

"Do you think Tale will win this year?"

No reply.

"Very cool for July?"

No reply.

"Terrible fire in the city last night, wasn't it?"

No reply.

"Shampoo?"

No reply.

"Just a little bay rum?"

Still, no reply. And the barber sat down, mystified, resigned. He had just been shaving himself.

* * *

"Boy, take these flowers to Miss Bertie Rohco, room 12."

"Sir, sir, you're the fourth gentleman who's sent her flowers today!"

"What's that? What the deuce —— W—who sent you?" stammered.

"Oh, they didn't send any names. They all said: 'She'll know who they came from.'"

"Well here, take my card, and tell her there are two more names who sent the other three boxes."

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy flesh should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a few days and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. Weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of a single inch or ounce, but what friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can put on from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but it does change food elements the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into that form of fat, producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment you get, and which your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the stomach into rich, red blood which now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh in muscles, nerves and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, effective and inexpensive.

Druggists sell it in large boxes—for your health's sake, demand a guarantee of weight increase or money back.—Advertisement.

To Overcome Sunburn, Tan, Freckles, Wrinkles

If your skin is unduly reddened, freckled or tanned, dab it with a cloth wrung out in hot water, then rub it with a piece of ice until it smarts a little. Then wash off with cold water. When you wash off the ice water in the morning, the skin will be made as pink and pretty as a baby's. Repeating this daily, for a few days, will remove all trace of sunburn, tan, freckles, wrinkles, and usually there's not the slightest hurt or inconvenience. Even the stubbornest freckles are said to disappear under this treatment. Powdered saxolite, which forms the new complexion is as fresh and youthful looking, once it's applied, as the complexion it replaces. It's the only thing known to actually discard the aged, faded skin. Saxolite can be obtained from any druggist or toilet counter, and only costs a few cents per ounce, so sufficient to last a week or more.

Any sun and wind- make you appear, and fearful of ever being seen outdoors, you're hard to recognize these untidy, badly freckled faces in a delicate mask by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint witch hazel.—ADVERTISEMENT.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were weak this afternoon, but ruled a little above their previous low for the day. Among declines in New York were Chesapeake & Ohio 1¼, Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred 1⅜, Canadian Pacific 2⅝, Missouri Pacific ⅝ at 11¼, Reading ⅝, Lehigh Valley 1⅝, New Haven 2 at 60, American Telephone 1, American Can ¼, Steel ⅝, Amalgamated ⅝, Baltimore & Ohio 1, Union Pacific ⅛ and New York Central 1⅝.

In Boston Calumet & Hecla was off 14, Boston & Maine ⅝, New Haven 2, United Fruit ¼, American Telephone ¼, Butte & Superior ¼, Calumet & Arizona ⅛, and Shoe ⅛. Boston Elevated was sold at par. It was up 1½ at 100.

Both Missouri Pacific and New Haven touched new "lows" during the morning. New Haven was down to 59¾ in New York and 59¼ in Boston.

STOCKS OPENED LOWER.

Stocks were weaker when markets opened, London leading the decline. Among Americans there Canadian Pacific, New York Central, Denver & Rio Grande and Pennsylvania showed large losses. New Haven, Chesapeake & Ohio and Missouri Pacific soon sold at new low prices in New York. In all three it is said there was liquidation. Trade last averaged lower all the morning and by midday was weaker than ever. It was reported that there would be a conference of bankers this afternoon in regard to the financial condition of Gould roads.

U. S. STEEL REPORT.

The report of the United States Steel Corporation as to unfilled tonnage at the end of June was not as good as was expected, but did not seem to have much market influence. Unfilled orders at the end of the month totaled 4,032,562 tons against 3,898,180 at the end of May. The increase was 34,697 tons only. A better showing had been predicted, as trade journals had reported more buying of steel products last month than previously this year. If Steel corporation figures are as much of an index as is believed, the steel trade is still as dull as it has been for years. As prices of products are very low there can be very little profit for manufacturers. For the June quarter the Lackawanna Steel Company reported a deficit of $235,472, compared with a surplus of $1,-012,675 for the corresponding 1913 period. The Steel corporation tonnage report added considerably to the general gloom. Bears found it easier today to force stocks out.

WALL STREET DISTURBED.

According to reports from New York, Wall Street is much disturbed over the attitude of the Senate banking committee towards Mr. Warburg. There is less hope that he will be confirmed as a member of the Federal Reserve Board, although Washington dispatches say that President Wilson is going to take the fight to his behalf to the floor of the Senate. One Republican member of the committee is said to have remarked—"There will be snowballs in Baldwin before the Warburg nomination comes out of the pigeon hole unless hell comes down." We are entitled to the facts. We expect to have them and all the howling of Wall Street interests and all the administration tottons will not swerve the democratic committee from the plain performance of its constitutional duty."

The fate of Mr. Jones of Chicago appears to give less concern.

It was announced, as usual, that the Eastern rate case would not be decided today. Hopes of an early decision before June rate advances based upon statements that several Interstate Commerce Commissioners are going on vacations soon, have resumed they would not go away and leave the country in suspense, though they have taken their time with judicial firmness to date.

NEW HAVEN EARNING MORE.

Earnings of the New York, New Haven & Hartford for May picked up somewhat, as the deficit of $159,094 reported compares with one of $258,-325 last year.

The Central New England Railway Company also reports a reduced deficit of $11,032, against $73,276. The New York, Westchester & Boston reports a deficit of $9,914, against a surplus of $25,232. The New York & Rhode Island Steamship Company a deficit of $25,-425, which is an increase of $15,440.

The Connecticut Co. increased surplus $25,194; the Rhode Island Co. bettered surplus by $37,435.

For eight months the New Haven's proper reports a deficit of $1,237,902, against $2,292,597 last year.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Interstate Commerce Commission reports that for the year ending by June operating revenues of railroads totalled $5,125,135,795, and net operating expenses $2,469,955,523, against $2,820,958,569 and $1,953,-653 in 1912.

The London copper warrants market was quiet this morning, and by noon spot was unchanged and futures 2s. 6d. lower. At the close spot was off 5s. and futures had declined 2s. 6d. more.

King Is Almost Hit by Militant Missile

DUNDEE, Scotland, July 10.—The usual suffragette outbreak which has occurred in every city in Scotland visited by King George and Queen Mary on their present tour took place here today. While their Majesties were driving through the city in an automobile a militant landed a bundle of suffrage pamphlets from the window of a building flanking the street. The missile narrowly missed the head of King George, who turned wearily to witness the arrest of the woman, a sight which has become common to him.

New Haven Rejects Terms of Legislature; Next Move Belongs to National Government

The New Haven Railroad has rejected the conditions on which the Governor and the Legislature were willing to part with the rights which the Commonwealth believes it retains under the Boston Railroad Holding Company act.

The Legislature consented to the agreement between the National Government and the New Haven Railroad, separating the Boston & Maine from the New Haven, on the condition that the stock which now represents the New Haven's control of the Boston & Maine should be stamped with a statement that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts reserves the right at any time to acquire this stock. The New Haven refuses its assent to this condition upon the ground that it would impair the market value of the stock.

In their report to their stockholders, the directors of the New Haven make the following statement:

"Their representatives conferred constantly with the Governor of Massachusetts and with Mr. Anderson, his adviser, and acceded to all that either suggested as proper to safeguard the interests of Massachusetts."

THIS STATEMENT IS NOT TRUE, so far as it implies that the New Haven acceded to all the demands which Governor Walsh made to safeguard the rights of the Commonwealth. Governor Walsh desired that provision for a referendum to the people of Massachusetts on the question whether or not the control of the Boston & Maine should be acquired by the Commonwealth, be made a part of the agreement and of the conditions under which the State consented to the agreement. Governor Walsh recommended in his special message to the Legislature that reference to the people be provided for in the act assenting to the agreement. The reactionary members of the Legislature defeated this proposal by the narrowest possible margin. If the New Haven had been willing to assent to this safeguard, it would now be the law.

The railroad situation in New England is once more in the air. Six months of travail have borne little fruit. THE NEXT MOVE BELONGS TO THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT. IT MUST BRING SUIT AGAINST THE NEW HAVEN TO COMPEL IT TO OBEY THE ANTI-TRUST LAW.

The AMERICAN hopes that the National Government will not delay these proceedings, but will begin them forthwith. In the meantime, if the New Haven has any suggestion to make which will conserve the interests of the Commonwealth and of New England against the danger of another disastrous railroad monopoly in this community, some compromise that will be less unsettling than the warlike measures which the National Government ought now to take, a special session of the Legislature could be called to deal with such a suggestion.

The Futile Work of a Closing Congress

Three bills now before the Senate will probably hold Congress in session until September 1. The President has strenuously opposed adjournment until all three are passed, and the Democratic majority in caucus has agreed to obey the presidential behest.

Possibly the public in general does not know precisely what are the measures which are to round out the Wilson program, measures which mark off the dividing line between the existing depression and the promised prosperity. Of them the President said:

"When the program is finished it is finished; the interrogation points are rubbed off the slate; business is given its constitution of freedom and is bidden go forward under that constitution. And just as soon as it gets that leave and freedom there will be a boom of business in this country such as we have never witnessed in the United States."

To attain this universally desired end these three bills are pushed by the President:

1. The Covington bill, creating an interstate trade commission.

2. The Rayburn bill, authorizing the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate the issuance of railway securities.

3. The Clayton Anti-Trust bill.

All have passed the House. Only the first is now actually before the Senate, the other two being still in committee. Of these latter the Rayburn bill has been practically discarded, having been wholly rewritten by Mr. Louis Brandeis, whose version is now being discussed in the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce.

President Wilson holds that these three bills constitute a complete and efficient arsenal for use against the trusts. With their enaction, he asserts that the legislative anti-trust program will be finished. Thereafter he promises to "business," which is disquieted by anti-trust agitation, a complete rest.

Which may be very well, but the program so loudly heralded does not promise any particular unrest for the trusts.

The Covington bill provides for a "smelling committee," with infinite capacity for annoyance and mischief, but absolutely without authority to rectify any abuses it may detect. So far from its enactment bringing to business that quiet which the President promises it will rather add a new source of disquiet. An interstate industrial commission with power to enforce its findings by inflicting penalties upon violators of an effective anti-trust law would be worth while. This bill, as it stands, will only cumber the statute book and add a few more highly paid commissioners to the public pay roll.

The Clayton bill, as it passed the House, was vague and inconclusive, attacking the trust problem from the wrong angle. Failing utterly to recognize the value of combination when properly regulated by law its author set himself to substitute for modern methods of business that unrestricted competition which is nothing but fratricidal and disastrous war. On its destructive side it is developed to a disastrous degree; of constructive legislation there is not a word in it.

The President may be right in saying that the passage of these measures will allay the business apprehension of harmful legislation. We hope he is. But he is emphatically wrong when he asserts that these hastily constructed measures, rushed through the House without debate, are going to constitute a final and complete code for the correction of all the evils of monopoly. Nothing in them justifies that hope.

The Teacup Tempest

(The Welsh-Ritchie Fight Reported Especially for This Department.)

WITH a countess sitting on my left, a duchess on my right,
I heard a reverend clergyman announce the coming fight.
A championship affair it was, but did the audience cheer?
No, cheering is the worst of form—they merely cried, "Hear, hear!"
The ushers passed around with tea; I got an awful bun—
(Don't get me wrong—they eat this kind—they call it Sally Lunn)
And while daintily I sipped and nibbling sips the boys came through the press
Preceded by a marquis and attired in evening dress.
The referee, though drinking tea in his chair outside the ropes,
Arose and bowed and said aloud, "There'll be no fouls, I hopes."
A baron sat in front of me—he seemed a regular chap—
And since I had a loose five bucks I gave his arm a tap.
"Which of 'em's Ritchie?" I remarked; "I'd like to make a bet."
"Please don't address me," he replied; "I'm sure we've never met."
The referee laid down his cup—he looked an awful toff—
"Pray, gentlemen, begin," said he (in other words, "They're off!")

* * *

The fight? I couldn't see a blow—a countess near the ring
Had ostrich feathers in her hair, which curtained everything.
"Who won?" I shouted at an earl. "It's very impolite,"
Said he, "to show such interest in the outcome of a fight."

Build the Way for Better Babies

By EDWIN MARKHAM

"BETTER Babies and Their Care" is the slogan name for a helpful book written by Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson and published by the Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. Mrs. Richardson, a wise mother, and chairman of the Department of Hygiene in the Congress of Mothers, steps together the latest ideas on the science and art of motherhood. Here is a fragment of the beginning before she takes up her practical details:

"Maternity is woman's exclusive profession, the only one of which progress and science cannot rob her. It is also her highest profession, for, compared to motherhood, art and science dwindle into insignificance.

"Successful motherhood, like genius in any art or profession, is founded on efficiency and joy in the chosen work, and the greater of these is joy. She who is keenly efficient can reduce the mountains which rise in the pathway of the mother; joy in motherhood can remove them. For joy casts out doubt, fear and all sense of burden.

"Motherhood, like any other profession, requires preparation. For many generations this world has held that the maternal instinct and the ability to rear children were born in woman. It has been discovered that the maternal instinct, like many others, needs enlightenment, while the ability to bring up children requires development or practical training.

"The phrase, 'a born mother,' has father fallen into disrepute. We are beginning to realize that one 'born mother' in a thousand is not enough to leaven the maternal mass, and out of this discovery has risen a demand, which comes largely from women themselves, for education in motherhood, for practical, sincere preparation for woman's exclusive profession.

"Preparation for motherhood must rise above the practical instruction in the care and feeding of infants which leads to efficiency. It requires a certain mental and spiritual adjustment of the woman to the environment and conditions of maternity.

"She who is obsessed by the fear of physical suffering which motherhood may entail, who regards the coming of a child as the end of her individual career, her social life, her personal pleasures, will be neither efficient nor joyous. Fear and doubt come between her and success. They even threaten her health.

"Therefore, the first step in preparation for motherhood is the firm belief that it is a privilege, not a duty; a joy, not a sacrifice; an investment that will pay big dividends.

"Start your maternal career right by preparing your body and your mind for motherhood. Start your baby right in life by studying sanitation, hygiene, the care and feeding of infants. Know your business as a mother, and motherhood will have no terrors for you."

The Making of Americans

By REV. C. F. AKED, D. D.

WHAT is more important to America than the making of Americans? With a large hospitality this new, strong nation calls to the older nations overseas and offers to their children all the rights of the free-born American after a short residence of five years and a perfunctory examination in American history and policy.

Such is the genius of Americanism that he is an American, whereso'ever born, who has an American heart, who loves liberty, cherishes the principles on which this republic is built, will live and if need be die in the determination that government of the people, for the people, by the people, shall not perish off the earth.

Americanism freely defined is a passion for liberty operating through law established and obeyed by the people. The average immigrant coming from some land of ignorance and night is just as capable of understanding this as he is of discussing it on the day he lands, in our language and before a university audience. The Americanizing of this prospective American cannot be left to chance.

In Dr. Gulick's book, "The American Japanese Problem," there is outlined a grand scheme for the Americanization of the future citizen.

First, Dr. Gulick thinks that the United States should do on a scale of nationals ... ifluence what the Young Men's Christian Association in many cities is doing within its own necessary limitations. He proposes that graded courses of study in American history, civics and the English language should be prepared, and be given for annual examinations under Federal supervision—free of charge.

Certificates of graduation should be essential for naturalization.

Federal aid might be given to institutions providing facilities for alien education. Night schools might be opened in public school buildings.

One specific suggestion is very interesting:

"A day might be set aside each year, perhaps the Fourth of July or Washington's Birthday, on which to administer with due solemnity the oath of allegiance, and to extend official welcome to all new citizens. Patriotic banquets and speeches with appropriate pins, banners and badges, could make the event as important and significant as commencement exercises are in our colleges and universities."

There is another side to all this. If the new citizen needs to know more about us, about America, and all for which America stands, do we not also need to know something of the great races which are pouring in the immigrants upon our shores?

We talk about the broadening influence of travel as we sit at home surrounded by our books. Let us travel now and then through the national and racial experiences of other peoples.

It is deeply significant that practically every young woman is a suffragist, and that nearly every anti-suffragist has passed her forty-fifth birthday. And the suffragists who are gray headed are those women who are young in mind. Their brains are still capable of taking new impressions. They can still change their opinions, get a broader view and a new outlook, and as long as we can do that we are young, no matter how many years have passed over our heads.

The minute we begin to think that there were no times like the good old times, no pies such as mother used to bake, no girls so beautiful and modest as the girls of our own girlhood, no men so courteous and brave, we are growing old. And when we find ourselves berating the present and thinking that the world is going to the dogs, and that modern ideas are corrupt, and modern progress retrogression, and modern liberty license, why, we had just as well order our tombstones, for we have ceased to live. We are dead ones, whether we know it or not.

The real reason that women age so much faster than men, and why a woman at forty is so often an old woman, and a man is generally still a boy, is just because women can't change their minds, or won't change their minds. They get case hardened and mummified, while men, being more open minded, are forever changing their opinions, and so using new brain cells, and having their youth renewed in them.

Another pertinent illustration of a woman's inability to change her mind is shown in what we call the faithfulness of woman. It has always been a matter of wonder to us that a woman could go on loving a man who treated her like a brute, who dragged her down into the gutter with him, and who beat and bruised her physically and spiritually.

Prof. Munsterberg's Theory Explains Phenomenon of Devotion

Professor Munsterburg's theory explains this phenomenon, of devotion. It is simply the result of woman's inability to change her mind. Having once had the indelible record of a man's charm made upon her, she goes on to the end of the chapter seeing him as she first saw him, beholding the handsome face of her young lover instead of the bloated and swollen and disfigured countenance of her husband, still hearing the echo of his passionate love vows that drown out the sound of his later abuses and curses.

Certain is it that a woman is romantic as long as she lives, and can still be a bride at heart after she has been married forty years, while a man's romance never survives the honeymoon, and he ceases to be a bridegroom at the altar.

And this can only be accounted for on the ground that the average woman never gets a new point of view, whereas the average man is always shifting his, and seeing things not as he remembered them, but as they are.

Professor Munsterburg's theory seems to have all the facts to back it up, but in taking away woman's right to change her mind he is depriving her of her last privilege.

The Real Changeless Sex---Woman

Scientists Have Just Proved That Vacillation Belongs Not to Femininity, but to the Scoffer, Man.

By DOROTHY DIX

IT'S wonderful the things that science is discovering about women. For example, in the past the feminine sex has always been called the fickle sex, and it has been generally held that a woman's mind has about as much stability to it as a weather vane, and that it veered around in every passing breeze of opinion.

Her Right to Change Mind Is Conceded to Be Constitutional

Indeed, this inability of the sex to hold to any fixed view on a matter has been conceded to be constitutional with woman and a thing that she could not help, poor dear, and woman's privilege of changing her mind has been considered to be one of the emoluments that consoled a woman for being a woman.

Now comes along Professor Munsterburg, who has made a study of the psychology of the sex, and he says that "women form their opinions and judgments just as rapidly and accurately as men, but when they have an opinion they stick to it, and no amount of discussion can change it."

Thus does science give the lie to tradition, and, as usual, science is right. For what is the much-vaunted conservatism and orthodoxy and faithfulness of woman except her tendency to close her mind to all further knowledge and evidence after she has once arrived at a certain opinion on a matter?

We see this illustrated in a thousand ways, but in nothing more vividly than in the question of the enfranchisement of women. If you will discuss this subject with the average woman she will agree with everything you say. If you ask her if she doesn't believe that taxation without representation is just as unjust for women in 1914 as it was for the men in 1776 she will say "Yes." If you ask her if she doesn't believe that women are just as much "people" as men are and as entitled to a voice in a democracy, she will say "Yes."

If you ask her if she doesn't think that a woman is entitled to a half interest, at least, in the child she has borne, she says "Yes." If you ask her if she doesn't think that she has enough intelligence to cast a vote, she will say "Yes." If you will ask her if it doesn't outrage her sense of justice, that she, an intelligent, educated woman, should be classed politically with the idiot, the criminal and the insane, she will say "Yes." If you ask her if she doesn't think that she is as much entitled to a vote in her own country as the foreigner, who has been here only seven years and who cannot speak the language, or the male beggar at her door, or the man she hires to wash her silver or attend to her furnace or rake out her furnace, she will say "Yes."

But when she's agreed with every argument in favor of the enfranchisement of women she will end up the discussion by saying she doesn't believe in votes for women. And she can give no reason for her disbelief. It is merely that in her early youth she accepted a theory that it would make women less attractive to men if they took part in politics, and would do some intangible violence to the home, and, her mind having run in that mould, is as set as concrete that has hardened into a block.

It is deeply significant that practically every young woman is a suffragist, and that nearly every anti-suffragist has passed her forty-fifth birthday. And the suffragists who are gray headed are those women who are young in mind. Their brains are still capable of taking new impressions. They can still change their opinions, get a broader view and a new outlook, and as long as we can do that we are young, no matter how many years have passed over our heads.

Rev. James Sheerin Discusses Church of England and Suffrage

To the Editor of the AMERICAN:

It is the opinion of the writer of this brief letter that the editorial page of the AMERICAN contains more wholesome moral and social truth than any other paper he has ever read. At any rate, there is more he can agree with there than he finds in other dailies, and he has not hesitated to say so on more than one occasion. And it not infrequently happens that he finds himself in disagreement with the editorial page of the AMERICAN. But when he does he has not hesitated to say so on more than one occasion, and even from the pulpit. It has seemed to him, without committing himself as to methods of serving up news, real or so-called, that it was a great thing that millions of readers in the United States, who have few other educational opportunities, were so wisely advised in the editorial page of the most widely-read paper in the world.

But Homer nods occasionally, and perhaps you will allow a man, who can say so many good things of you, to say one thing that you have not. A Reverend Archbishop on Woman Suffrage," is strangely unfair to the facts in the case. Passing by the incidental mistake in calling the head of the Church of England "a Protestant Episcopal bishop," a name unknown to the law or the usage of England, is it not reprehensibly unjust to quote the passages you do as if it were the words of a man opposed to woman's [illegible]? Is it not a fact that Archbishop Davidson voted for woman's suffrage in the House of Lords within three months past?

Is it not also a remarkably encouraging thing that the chief archbishop of the world, a title once recognized by the Pope of Rome as that of "Pope of the Western World," should be willing to go on record as in favor of votes for women? Is it not like unusual courage for a man occupying so conservative an office to do this? He is the biggest man in Church or State who has yet dared go on record as such.

Would it not be better if you showed what progress the cause of woman's suffrage has made when one of the greatest officials of the world lends it his support, and does it in the face of much legitimate and powerful opposition? Does it detract from the strength of his voluntary aid that he warns against the violent methods a few women have adopted? If so, their cause must be weak indeed, for there be few good men who would favor the militant in her militancy. Or isn't this so? At least it seems so to a lifelong believer in votes for women.

St. Matthew's Church,
